Weaver Enters Protest

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Unless budget cuts are restored, Dr. John C. Weaver says the University of Missouri may have to pinch off some of its operations.

Weaver, president of the university, also said a proposed new medical school at Kansas City could not be started unless the university gets its full operating request.

Weaver told Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and the chairmen of the House and Senate Appropriations Committees Tuesday a proposed budget of $73,145,735 in operating funds for all four campuses might force the university to restrict enrollment, reduce or eliminate research, close some hospital rooms and eliminate some special services.

He said it would take an additional $566,000 just to stand still.

The university asked for $97,147,733 or about $24 million more than this year. The Commission on Higher Education recommended $92,086,9308 but Budget Director John C. Vaughn cut the total to $82,157,892.

That included a 5 per cent salary increase but Weaver said a boost of at least 7 per cent would be necessary to keep the university competitive with other midwestern schools.

Among the requests was $150 000 for preliminary planning of a new medical school at Kansas City and $460,000 for preliminary staffing.

Weaver said the state would have to build a $3.5 million medical science building while Kansas City and Jackson County would finance a teaching hospital from bond issue funds.

Hearnes said he wanted to have the agreement with Kansas City and Jackson County in final form before committing the state to a long term expenditure for a new medical school.

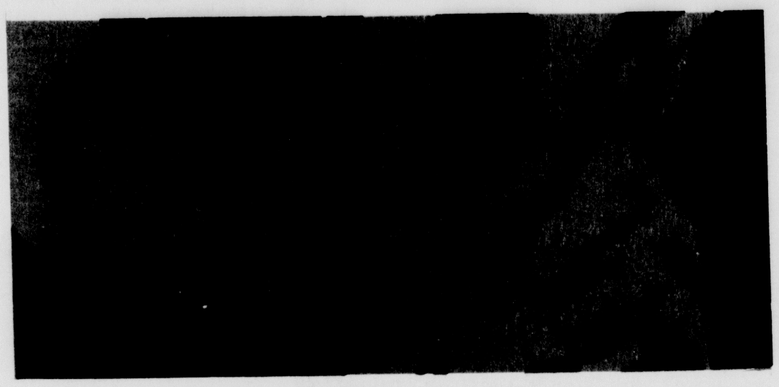
Thieu Says Talks Won't Mean Fighting Over



SAIGON (AP) - President Nguyen Van Thieu said today a South Vietnamese delegation will go to the Paris talks within the next 10 days but he cautioned his nation not to expect peace to come soon. The enemy will fight while he talks, Thieu declared.

He said he will announce the makeup of the delegation in the next few days.

Thieu said that Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky will go to Paris as over-all coordinator of the Saigon delegation, although he will not actually sit in on the negotiating sessions.

Thieu said that Ky "is the man I rely on to lead the delegation to Paris, but he is not the chief of the delegation. His role will be to coordinate and advise the delegation itself."

Theiu, appearing on television and nationwide radio 12 hours after his government announced it had lifted its boycott of the Paris talks, declared: "Talks with the Communists do not mean peace will be restored soon. They will fight while they are talking and talk while they are fighting."

Thieu said South Vietnam, however, will show to its allies and the enemy "that we have plenty of good will."

He asserted that whether "aggression" ends "depends on Hanoi and their tool" an obvious reference to the rebel National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong.

In Paris, a National Liberation Front spokesman said the NLF would insist on going into the four-way talks "as an independent party on the same footing" as the United States, North Vietnam and the South Vietnamese.

Spokesman Duong Dinh Thao rejected the U.S.-South Vietnamese statement that Washington and Saigon regarded the Paris talks as a two-sided meeting in which the NLF would be part of the North Vietnamese team.

The NLF claims it is the true representative of the people of South Vietnam.

Although Thieu said the talks would get under way "in the next few days" U.S. officials in Washington expect the serious conferences will not get going until late in December.

Thieu declared that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese "have to abandon their aggression and peace will be restored."

Thieu claimed that since the bomb halt, 950 civilians had been wounded through shellings, sabotage and terrorism.

U.S. officials said the Saigon delegation, expected to be led by Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky, is due to leave for Paris by the end of the week.

But they said the next two to three weeks will be devoted to settling preliminary—and possibly troublesome—problems of seating arrangements and agenda.

Although the four sides—Hanoi, Saigon, the United States and the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong—presumably will be holding joint sessions to work out the preliminaries, U.S. officials said these matters must be settled before "direct and serious negotiations" on ending the war can start.

President Johnson, in Texas for the Thanksgiving holiday, hailed the Saigon agreement as a "new and hopeful phase in the negotiations" which began last May between the United States and Hanoi.

But, he cautioned, "we must expect both hard bargaining and hard fighting in the days ahead."

In Saigon, President Thieu, who had demanded a leadership role in the talks and had objected to dealing directly with the NLF, said South Vietnam's sovereignty had been respected.

The United States spelled out in detail its assurances to South Vietnam in an 850-word statement saying Saigon "will take the lead and be the main spokesman on all matters which are of principal concern to South Vietnam."

Before Saigon was willing to end its boycott it became necessary for the United States to issue publicly the series of assurances.

Foremost among these, officials said, was a guarantee that the United States "does not believe aggression should be rewarded and will not recognize any form of government not freely chosen through democratic and legal process by the people of South Vietnam."

The United States declared, as it had in the past, that a coalition government imposed on South Vietnam would conflict with this principle of free determination.

The United States said it looked forward to the new round of Paris meetings to start with "a clean slate." It reminded North Vietnam that President Johnson had stopped the bombing of the North and said that there could not be productive talks if the cities of Vietnam were being shelled or if the Demilitarized Zone at the 17th parallel was being abused.

The closest cooperation with South Vietnam was pledged for the remainder of the peace negotiations. But officials explained this did not give Saigon a veto over U.S. policies.

The United States made clear once again that it would not recognize the National Liberation Front.

A Daily Experience

By DAVID POLING

Albert Schweitzer once said that he had never shown enough thanks. There were so many people who had helped him along the way. Too often he had neglected to be timely and personal in his thanks.

Thanksgiving should be, for the thoughtful and sensitive, a daily experience. We are so easily distracted by the calamities and uncertainties of our day that we fail to see the joy and brilliance of life.

With so much anxiety and defeat in that tentative New England housing development, circled by dark forests, cold winters, and unpredictable Indians, we marvel that the first Thanksgiving even came off. Yet, they offered thanks to God for his goodness and greatness. We all live in that tradition.

Here we are in one of the most upsetting times of our national life. The divisions of the country are much more than geography or region. The angry ghetto, the alienated youth, the pickets this autumn in the schoolyards of New York and the grape kingdoms of California, are only a part of the general uneasiness. Perhaps that is all the more reason and purpose of a day of Thanksgiving.

For this holiday is nothing if it cannot suspend our aggravations, silence our complaints, mute the shrill critic, and turn off the rebel yell long enough to see the generous, even lavish, gifts of the Creator. Even to the unjust, the undeserving, the UNTHANKING, the rain does fall and the harvest does appear.

In the fall of 1863, as the Civil War approached the high point of its fury, when New York City buried 1,000 after the summer draft riots, Abraham Lincoln issued a Thanksgiving proclamation that expressed his confidence in the outcome.

"Needful diversions of wealth and of strength from the fields of peaceful industry to the national defense have not arrested the plow, the shuttle, or the ship; the ax has enlarged the borders of our settlements, and the mines, as well of iron and coal as of the precious metals, have yielded even more abundantly than heretofore.

"No human counsel hath devised, nor hath any mortal hand worked out these great things. They are the gracious gifts of the most high God.

"It has seemed to me fit and proper that they should be solemnly, reverently, and gratefully acknowledged as with one heart and one voice by the whole American people. I do, therefore, invite my fellow-citizens in every part of the United States . . . to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a day of thanksgiving and praise to our beneficent Father."

Thanksgiving provides the formal date to observe these events, people, and ideas in the world that often go unnoticed. For Lincoln, it meant the recognition of God's abundance during man's adversity. For Schweitzer, in his "Memoirs of Childhood and Youth," it must be a constant effort of appreciation and acknowledgement:

"I am stirred by the thought of the number of people whom I have to thank for what they gave me or what they were to me. At the same time I am haunted by an oppressive consciousness of the little gratitude I really showed them when I was young."

Youth is such a receiving time, a getting period, that thankfulness is lost in the exuberance of life. Larry James, the 21-year-old gold medal sprinter on the U.S. Olympic team in Mexico City, flashed to the fastest hundred that he had ever run. With all the fame and honor that accompanies such a feat, he told a White Plains, N.Y., homecoming that so much was owed to his mother, his church, his school, his coaches, in making this performance possible.

His Thanksgiving was incomplete unless it was shared.

There is one other role for Thanksgiving to play in our lives—celebration. This is too absent in our split-level society with its frozen turkeys, toys every Saturday, and movies every night.

Celebrations should accompany accomplishments, victory, and deliverance. And we should not have to wait until a war is settled or a New Year's Eve or a wedding reception to let the good times roll. Over in the Virgin Islands they celebrate Thanksgiving on Oct. 25—the official end of the hurricane season!

But the best Thanksgiving of all comes from a sense of trust in the ways of God. In one of Sister Corita's posters I found the text for today:

to believe in God
is to know that all the rules will be fair and that there will be wonderful surprises.

Nuclear Weapon Move Mulled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is considering moving its nuclear weapons Warheads in Western Europe to new hiding places for fear spies have pinpointed their present location for the Soviet Union.

Officials say they can't be sure how much Russia knows, but they became concerned after a top German officer was found shot to death and a Turkish diplomat was arrested.

It's feared the Soviets may possess technical data on sophisticated nuclear weapons and North Atlantic Treaty Organization war plans.

Interrogation of Nihat Imre, Turkish senior administrative official at supreme headquarters of the allied powers in Brussels, is hoped to reveal how much Russia knows. He is being questioned in Ankara, Turkey.

Imre was arrested Oct. 6 and charged with espionage. Three days later German Rear Adm. Hermann Luedke was found shot to death in a hunting area. He had just retired as NATO deputy chief of logistics and supply planning.

'Luedke could have had access to physical inventories, location of bases," said a senior U.S. official.

The United States has about 7,200 tactical nuclear weapons stored in Europe including battlefield missiles, artillery and jet fighter-bomber ammunition. Warheads are stored separated in strategic locations and would be mated with the weapons if and when needed.

Orphaned Boys Stick Together

LODI, N.J. (AP) — Four orphaned brothers will spend Thanksgiving together with friends while the oldest, 16-year-old Bruce Westbrook, tries to find a way to keep his family under one roof.

A fire destroyed their trailer home Monday, and Bruce has been living with a friend's family. His brothers, Keith, 13, Brian, 12, and James, 10, have been living with another family.

Bruce vowed Tuesday to find a five-or six-room apartment for himself and his brothers and their grandmother, 78-year-old Mrs. Mary Broderick, of New York City, who has been looking after them daily since their father, Robert Westbrook, died Oct. 22. Their mother died in 1963.

"They are my brothers and they are going to stay with me," Bruce says.

He said he will discuss the family's future with a representative of the Children's Bureau of the Bergen County Welfare office.

However, it is not certain that the law will permit the youth to live with his brothers under such an arrangement. He is under the age required to be their guardian and it is not certain how much income he can provide.

Living Costs Rise Sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — Living costs jumped six-tenths of one per cent in October for the biggest monthly rise in eight years and increasing 1968's sharpest rate of price hikes in 17 years, the government said today.

Clothing and transportation costs were up nine-tenths of one per cent each, food and housing up four-tenths each and medical care rose seven-tenths, said the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Asst. Commissioner Arnold Chase of the bureau said the over-all rise in living costs in 1968 "could very well be around 4.5 per cent for the year," highest since the 5.9 per cent rise in 1951 before Korean War pricewage controls were imposed.

But Chase said the rate of increase is expected to taper off and that the government sees no need for similar controls now.

The October increase brought the consumer price index to 122.9. This means it cost $12.29 last month for every $10 worth of typical family purchases in the 1957-59 period on which the index is based.

The bureau also reported that the sharp rise in prices combined with a small reduction in the average work week, reduced the average purchasing power of the nation's approximately 45 million rank and file workers.

The average gross paycheck last month was $110.67, down 20 cents from September. After taxes, purchasing power of the average paycheck was about the same as a year ago for single workers, and about 1.2 per cent higher for workers with three dependents.

Missouri Utilities Company has a non-exclusive franchise to serve Miner.

Brooke Says He Discussed Cabinet Post With Nixon But Has Turned It Down

NEW YORK (AP) - Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass, said he had discussed a cabinet post with President-elect Richard M. Nixon today but had turned it down.

Brooke, the first Negro senator since Reconstruction, talking to newsmen after conferring with Nixon, said he told Nixon, "I think I can best serve the country and the Nixon administration by continuing in the Senate."

Ron Ziegler, Nixon's press spokesman, later said that New York's Republican governor, Nelson A. Rockefeller, also told Nixon at a secret meeting Tuesday that "he did not desire a position in the administration."

Ziegler said that at the Nixon-Rockefeller conference no job offers at all were made.

The press aide also belatedly disclosed that Nixon had a second secret meeting Tuesday with David Rockefeller, the governor's brother who is board chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank.

David Rockefeller was said to have discussed with the president-elect certain recommendations for appointments to toplevel federal posts. Ziegler said there was no discussion about a cabinet offer to the banker, frequently mentioned in speculation as a possible secretary of the Treasury in the next administration.

Brooke, a former attorney general of Massachusetts, was asked whether Nixon had offered to nominate him for U.S. attorney general. The senator declined to specify exactly what job or jobs were involved, saying simply: "We discussed the possibility of my coming into the cabinet."

He said he would "be working very closely with the administration" and without getting specific, indicated Nixon plans to give him some special assignments—conceivably involving missions abroad—that would permit him to retain his Senate seat.

Ziegler was questioned at length about Nixon meetings Tuesday with the two Rockefellers and Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. They were only confirmed after they had occurred.

He was asked if there would be a continuing pattern of secret meetings.

"To the best of our ability, it will not," he said.

According to Ziegler Nixon exchanged only social chit-chat and a handshake with Thurmond.

The president-elect scheduled, and announced, a busy round of appointments for todayincluding one with Vice President-elect Spiro T. Agnew.

Thurmond, the Dixiecrat of 20 years ago, often was the target of 1968 campaign barbs from Nixon's Democratic opponents because of the South Carolinian's energetic efforts in behalf of the election winner.

Newsmen discovered Thurmond's presence at Nixon's Pierre Hotel headquarters quite by accident—and after Ron Ziegler, the official press spokesman, had said Nixon would have no appointments with outsiders.

Ziegler later said Thurmond happened to be in New York and dropped by the Pierre to leave a speaking invitation for Nixon with the president-elect's campaign manager and former law partner, John Mitchell.

According to Ziegler, Mitchell suggested that, since Thurmond was in the building, he pay his respects to Nixon. He indicated that only pleasantries were involved.

Thurmond, questioned on his departure, said he and Nixon talked about nothing of substance. But he took the occasion to air for newsmen some of his familiar views: that billions more must be spent for defense and that part of the cost could be offset by dismantling the Office of Economic Opportunity, which administers the antipoverty program. He said he did not talk to Nixon about those matters.

There seemed to be no urgency about the invitation Thurmond delivered, that he'd like Nixon to give the commencement address next May at The Citadel, a military school in South Carolina.

Two jobs were parceled out Tuesday: Robert F. Ellsworth, a former GOP house member from Kansas who was political director of the Nixon campaign, will be a presidential assistant come Jan. 20, with broad unspecified duties; Air Force Col. James D. Hughes, a Vietnam veteran most recently assigned in West Germany, will be armed forces aide to the new president, a job he held on the staff of the then-Vice President Nixon in 1957-61.

Weaver, president of the university, also said a proposed new medical school at Kansas City could not be started unless the university gets its full operating request.

Weaver told Gov. Warren E. He said it would take an additional $566,000 just to stand still.

The university asked for $97,147,733 or about $24 million more than this year. The Commission on Higher Education recommended $92,086,9308 but Budget Director John C. Vaughn cut the total to $82,157,892.

That included a 5 per cent salary increase but Weaver said a boost of at least 7 per cent would be necessary to keep the university competitive with other midwestern schools.

Among the requests was $150 000 for preliminary planning of a new medical school at Kansas City and $460,000 for preliminary staffing.

Weaver said the state would have to build a $3.5 million medical science building while Kansas City and Jackson County would finance a teaching hospital from bond issue funds.

Hearnes said he wanted to have the agreement with Kansas City and Jackson County in final form before committing the state to a long term expenditure for a new medical school.

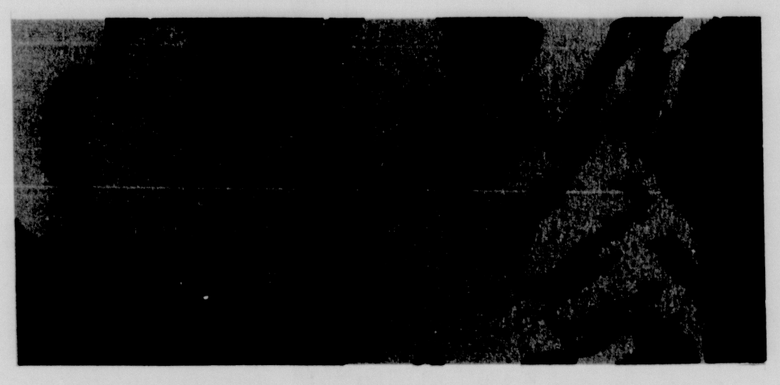
Thieu Says Talks Won't Mean Fighting Over



SAIGON (AP) - President Nguyen Van Thieu said today a South Vietnamese delegation will go to the Paris talks within the next 10 days but he cautioned his nation not to expect peace to come soon. The enemy will fight while he talks, Thieu declared.

He said he will announce the makeup of the delegation in the next few days.

Thieu said that Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky will go to Paris as over-all coordinator of the Saigon delegation, although he will not actually sit in on the negotiating sessions.

Thieu said that Ky "is the man I rely on to lead the delegation to Paris, but he is not the chief of the delegation. His role will be to coordinate and advise the delegation itself."

Thieu, appearing on television and nationwide radio 12 hours after his government announced it had lifted its boycott of the Paris talks, declared: "Talks with the Communists do not mean peace will be restored soon. They will fight while they are talking and talk while they are fighting."

Thieu said South Vietnam, however, will show to its allies and the enemy "that we have plenty of good will."

He asserted that whether "aggression" ends "depends on Hanoi and their tool" an obvious reference to the rebel National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong.

In Paris, a National Liberation Front spokesman said the NLF would insist on going into the four-way talks "as an independent party on the same footing" as the United States, North Vietnam and the South Vietnamese.

Spokesman Duong Dinh Thao rejected the U.S.-South Vietnamese statement that Washington and Saigon regarded the Paris talks as a two-sided meeting in which the NLF would be part of the North Vietnamese team.

The NLF claims it is the true representative of the people of South Vietnam.

Although Thieu said the talks would get under way "in the next few days" U.S. officials in Washington expect the serious conferences will not get going until late in December.

Thieu declared that the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese "have to abandon their aggression and peace will be restored."

Thieu claimed that since the bomb halt, 950 civilians had been wounded through shellings, sabotage and terrorism.

U.S. officials said the Saigon delegation, expected to be led by Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky, is due to leave for Paris by the end of the week.

But they said the next two to three weeks will be devoted to settling preliminary—and possibly troublesome—problems of seating arrangements and agenda.

Although the four sides—Hanoi, Saigon, the United States and the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong—presumably will be holding joint sessions to work out the preliminaries, U.S. officials said these matters must be settled before "direct and serious negotiations" on ending the war can start.

President Johnson, in Texas for the Thanksgiving holiday, hailed the Saigon agreement as a "new and hopeful phase in the negotiations" which began last May between the United States and Hanoi.

But, he cautioned, "we must expect both hard bargaining and hard fighting in the days ahead."

In Saigon, President Thieu, who had demanded a leadership role in the talks and had objected to dealing directly with the NLF, said South Vietnam's sovereignty had been respected.

The United States spelled out in detail its assurances to South Vietnam in an 850-word statement saying Saigon "will take the lead and be the main spokesman on all matters which are of principal concern to South Vietnam."

Before Saigon was willing to end its boycott it became necessary for the United States to issue publicly the series of assurances.

Foremost among these, officials said, was a guarantee that the United States "does not believe aggression should be rewarded and will not recognize any form of government not freely chosen through democratic and legal process by the people of South Vietnam."

The United States declared, as it had in the past, that a coalition government imposed on South Vietnam would conflict with this principle of free determination.

The United States said it looked forward to the new round of Paris meetings to start with "a clean slate." It reminded North Vietnam that President Johnson had stopped the bombing of the North and said that there could not be productive talks if the cities of Vietnam were being shelled or if the Demilitarized Zone at the 17th parallel was being abused.

The closest cooperation with South Vietnam was pledged for the remainder of the peace negotiations. But officials explained this did not give Saigon a veto over U.S. policies.

The United States made clear once again that it would not recognize the National Liberation Front.

A Daily Experience

By DAVID POLING

Albert Schweitzer once said that he had never shown enough thanks. There were so many people who had helped him along the way. Too often he had neglected to be timely and personal in his thanks.

Thanksgiving should be, for the thoughtful and sensitive, a daily experience. We are so easily distracted by the calamities and uncertainties of our day that we fail to see the joy and brilliance of life.

With so much anxiety and defeat in that tentative New England housing development, circled by dark forests, cold winters, and unpredictable Indians, we marvel that the first Thanksgiving even came off. Yet, they offered thanks to God for his goodness and greatness. We all live in that tradition.

Here we are in one of the most upsetting times of our national life. The divisions of the country are much more than geography or region. The angry ghetto, the alienated youth, the pickets this autumn in the schoolyards of New York and the grape kingdoms of California, are only a part of the general uneasiness. Perhaps that is all the more reason and purpose of a day of Thanksgiving.

For this holiday is nothing if it cannot suspend our aggravations, silence our complaints, mute the shrill critic, and turn off the rebel yell long enough to see the generous, even lavish, gifts of the Creator. Even to the unjust, the undeserving, the UNTHANKING, the rain does fall and the harvest does appear.

In the fall of 1863, as the Civil War approached the high point of its fury, when New York City buried 1,000 after the summer draft riots, Abraham Lincoln issued a Thanksgiving proclamation that expressed his confidence in the outcome.

"Needful diversions of wealth and of strength from the fields of peaceful industry to the national defense have not arrested the plow, the shuttle, or the ship; the ax has enlarged the borders of our settlements, and the mines, as well of iron and coal as of the precious metals, have yielded even more abundantly than heretofore.

"No human counsel hath devised, nor hath any mortal hand worked out these great things. They are the gracious gifts of the most high God.

"It has seemed to me fit and proper that they should be solemnly, reverently, and gratefully acknowledged as with one heart and one voice by the whole American people. I do, therefore, invite my fellow-citizens in every part of the United States . . . to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a day of thanksgiving and praise to our beneficent Father."

Thanksgiving provides the formal date to observe these events, people, and ideas in the world that often go unnoticed. For Lincoln, it meant the recognition of God's abundance during man's adversity. For Schweitzer, in his "Memoirs of Childhood and Youth," it must be a constant effort of appreciation and acknowledgement:

"I am stirred by the thought of the number of people whom I have to thank for what they gave me or what they were to me. At the same time I am haunted by an oppressive consciousness of the little gratitude I really showed them when I was young."

Youth is such a receiving time, a getting period, that thankfulness is lost in the exuberance of life. Larry James, the 21-year-old gold medal sprinter on the U.S. Olympic team in Mexico City, flashed to the fastest hundred that he had ever run. With all the fame and honor that accompanies such a feat, he told a White Plains, N.Y., homecoming that so much was owed to his mother, his church, his school, his coaches, in making this performance possible.

His Thanksgiving was incomplete unless it was shared.

There is one other role for Thanksgiving to play in our lives—celebration. This is too absent in our split-level society with its frozen turkeys, toys every Saturday, and movies every night.

Celebrations should accompany accomplishments, victory, and deliverance. And we should not have to wait until a war is settled or a New Year's Eve or a wedding reception to let the good times roll. Over in the Virgin Islands they celebrate Thanksgiving on Oct. 25—the official end of the hurricane season!

But the best Thanksgiving of all comes from a sense of trust in the ways of God. In one of Sister Corita's posters I found the text for today:

to believe in God
is to know that all the rules will be fair and that there will be
wonderful surprises.

Denver Lee Bailey, 23, Senath, a barge line worker, was killed Tuesday at 10:30 p.m. on route A, two and one-half miles north of Senath, in Dunklin county, when he lost control of his 1962 Chevrolet, and struck a bridge.

He was alone in the car he was driving north. It ran off the road, the state patrol reported.

Nuclear Weapon Move Mulled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is considering moving its nuclear weapons Warheads in Western Europe to new hiding places for fear spies have pinpointed their present location for the Soviet Union.

Officials say they can't be sure how much Russia knows, but they became concerned after a top German officer was found shot to death and a Turkish diplomat was arrested.

It's feared the Soviets may possess technical data on sophisticated nuclear weapons and North Atlantic Treaty Organization war plans.

Interrogation of Nihat Imre, Turkish senior administrative official at supreme headquarters of the allied powers in Brussels, is hoped to reveal how much Russia knows. He is being questioned in Ankara, Turkey.

Imre was arrested Oct. 6 and charged with espionage. Three days later German Rear Adm. Hermann Luedke was found shot to death in a hunting area. He had just retired as NATO deputy chief of logistics and supply planning.

'Luedke could have had access to physical inventories, location of bases," said a senior U.S. official.

The United States has about 7,200 tactical nuclear weapons stored in Europe including battlefield missiles, artillery and jet fighter-bomber ammunition. Warheads are stored separated in strategic locations and would be mated with the weapons if and when needed.

Orphaned Boys Stick Together

LODI, N.J. (AP) — Four orphaned brothers will spend Thanksgiving together with friends while the oldest, 16-year-old Bruce Westbrook, tries to find a way to keep his family under one roof.

A fire destroyed their trailer home Monday, and Bruce has been living with a friend's family. His brothers, Keith, 13, Brian, 12, and James, 10, have been living with another family.

Bruce vowed Tuesday to find a five-or six-room apartment for himself and his brothers and their grandmother, 78-year-old Mrs. Mary Broderick, of New York City, who has been looking after them daily since their father, Robert Westbrook, died Oct. 22. Their mother died in 1963.

"They are my brothers and they are going to stay with me," Bruce says.

He said he will discuss the family's future with a representative of the Children's Bureau of the Bergen County Welfare office.

However, it is not certain that the law will permit the youth to live with his brothers under such an arrangement. He is under the age required to be their guardian and it is not certain how much income he can provide.

Living Costs Rise Sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — Living costs jumped six-tenths of one per cent in October for the biggest monthly rise in eight years and increasing 1968's sharpest rate of price hikes in 17 years, the government said today.

Clothing and transportation costs were up nine-tenths of one per cent each, food and housing up four-tenths each and medical care rose seven-tenths, said the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Asst. Commissioner Arnold Chase of the bureau said the over-all rise in living costs in 1968 "could very well be around 4.5 per cent for the year," highest since the 5.9 per cent rise in 1951 before Korean War pricewage controls were imposed.

But Chase said the rate of increase is expected to taper off and that the government sees no need for similar controls now.

The October increase brought the consumer price index to 122.9. This means it cost $12.29 last month for every $10 worth of typical family purchases in the 1957-59 period on which the index is based.

The bureau also reported that the sharp rise in prices combined with a small reduction in the average work week, reduced the average purchasing power of the nation's approximately 45 million rank and file workers.

The average gross paycheck last month was $110.67, down 20 cents from September. After taxes, purchasing power of the average paycheck was about the same as a year ago for single workers, and about 1.2 per cent higher for workers with three dependents.

Brooke Says He Discussed Cabinet Post With Nixon But Has Turned It Down

NEW YORK (AP) - Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass, said he had discussed a cabinet post with President-elect Richard M. Nixon today but had turned it down.

Brooke, the first Negro senator since Reconstruction, talking to newsmen after conferring with Nixon, said he told Nixon, "I think I can best serve the country and the Nixon administration by continuing in the Senate."

Ron Ziegler, Nixon's press spokesman, later said that New York's Republican governor, Nelson A. Rockefeller, also told Nixon at a secret meeting Tuesday that "he did not desire a position in the administration."

Ziegler said that at the Nixon-Rockefeller conference no job offers at all were made.

The press aide also belatedly disclosed that Nixon had a second secret meeting Tuesday with David Rockefeller, the governor's brother who is board chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank.

David Rockefeller was said to have discussed with the president-elect certain recommendations for appointments to toplevel federal posts. Ziegler said there was no discussion about a cabinet offer to the banker, frequently mentioned in speculation as a possible secretary of the Treasury in the next administration.

Brooke, a former attorney general of Massachusetts, was asked whether Nixon had offered to nominate him for U.S. attorney general. The senator declined to specify exactly what job or jobs were involved, saying simply: "We discussed the possibility of my coming into the cabinet."

He said he would "be working very closely with the administration" and without getting specific, indicated Nixon plans to give him some special assignments—conceivably involving missions abroad—that would permit him to retain his Senate seat.

Ziegler was questioned at length about Nixon meetings Tuesday with the two Rockefellers and Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. They were only confirmed after they had occurred.

He was asked if there would be a continuing pattern of secret meetings.

"To the best of our ability, it will not," he said.

According to Ziegler Nixon exchanged only social chit-chat and a handshake with Thurmond.

The president-elect scheduled, and announced, a busy round of appointments for todayincluding one with Vice President-elect Spiro T. Agnew.

Thurmond, the Dixiecrat of 20 years ago, often was the target of 1968 campaign barbs from Nixon's Democratic opponents because of the South Carolinian's energetic efforts in behalf of the election winner.

Newsmen discovered Thurmond's presence at Nixon's Pierre Hotel headquarters quite by accident—and after Ron Ziegler, the official press spokesman, had said Nixon would have no appointments with outsiders.

Ziegler later said Thurmond happened to be in New York and dropped by the Pierre to leave a speaking invitation for Nixon with the president-elect's campaign manager and former law partner, John Mitchell.

According to Ziegler, Mitchell suggested that, since Thurmond was in the building, he pay his respects to Nixon. He indicated that only pleasantries were involved.

Thurmond, questioned on his departure, said he and Nixon talked about nothing of substance. But he took the occasion to air for newsmen some of his familiar views: that billions more must be spent for defense and that part of the cost could be offset by dismantling the Office of Economic Opportunity, which administers the antipoverty program. He said he did not talk to Nixon about those matters.

There seemed to be no urgency about the invitation Thurmond delivered, that he'd like Nixon to give the commencement address next May at The Citadel, a military school in South Carolina.

Two jobs were parceled out Tuesday: Robert F. Ellsworth, a former GOP house member from Kansas who was political director of the Nixon campaign, will be a presidential assistant come Jan. 20, with broad unspecified duties; Air Force Col. James D. Hughes, a Vietnam veteran most recently assigned in West Germany, will be armed forces aide to the new president, a job he held on the staff of the then-Vice President Nixon in 1957-61.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS:

Do you have your list of things for which you will give thanks tomorrow? Some have long lists, some have short lists but all should have at least one cause for thanksgiving.

We asked one little boy what he had to be thankful for this year - something that he didn't have last year (thinking it would be that he had a new little sister) but he startled me by saying "I'm thankful I've grown some this year and can eat more turkey Thanksgiving." He at least had something to give thanks for.

Let us turn aside from the cares and demands of life express sincere thanks for the so, so many good things that have come our way in the year 1968.

And let's give our thanks sincerely!

THANKSGIVING, 1968

In this hurried world, there are still a few times when we pause and with humility and reverence recall our heritage and give thanks for our spiritual and material blessings. Thanksgiving is such a time. The first Thanksgiving Day was observed by the pilgrims at Plymouth Colony after their first harvest in 1621. President Lincoln in 1864 proclaimed the fourth Thursday of November as Thanksgiving Day, and it has been so since that time.

Legislation is now before Congress which would shift the observance of five of our national holidays to Mondays, on the theory that this would avoid breaking up the working week and provide five clearly defined three-day weekends. Shifts are proposed for Washington's Birthday (to become Presidents Day), Memorial Day, Independence Day, Veterans Day and Thanksgiving. Whatever may be said for this proposal as it affects the rest of these occasions, one may hope that Thanksgiving is not finally included among them. As things now stand, this is quite generally observed as a four-day holiday. A time for families to get together--schools and colleges are closed from Wednesday till Monday. This would be sharply changed if Thanksgiving were just another three-day weekend. For more than a hundred years, the fourth Thursday of every November has been the time for families to serve that reminder of the Lord's bounty-the traditional Thanksgiving Dinner. Changing this day would to many minds detract from its significance. Traditions are an important part of the continuity that lends strength to a people and to a nation. In these times, it would seem well for us to keep as many of them as we can.

REMEMBERING...

"There is one day that is ours...Thanksgiving Day...is the one day that is purely American."

And how right O'Henry was. Thanksgiving is peculiarly and exclusively American- American in origin and tradition, American in observance and thought.

To O'Henry, it was day for going home— the home of childhood— to partake once again of homemade biscuits and to observe that the porch wasn't as far from the old well as it had seemed when he was a boy.

So Thanksgiving is memory, too— richer, happier memory each year one grows older. To you, perhaps, the memory of pumpkin and mincemeat pies, of turkey and church services on a frosty November morn, or the climactic football game on a crisp Thanksgiving afternoon. Or of Mom and Pop, standing 10 feet tall in disciplinary justice, and closer than God when there was need for love and comfort.

Or perhaps your memories differ, but those are the things we recall of those happy Thanksgivings of a half-century ago— except the turkey; our family in those days couldn't afford turkey. Recall in memory only, for all are gone— Mom and Pop, the mince and pumpkin pies. The old home still stands, but no longer warm and big and comforting as it was to the boy of 50 years ago, but somehow shabby, tumbledown and forlorn and, oh, so small.

All gone but the memories to which we'll cling until that time when we'll need memories no more. And so it is with most persons, we'd guess.

But Thanksgiving wasn't designed for old memories alone. Originally it was in remembrance of the blessings of one year— material blessings as well as spiritual ones.

Perhpas you have had much this past year to put gratitude in your heart; if so, thanks-giving is easy.

Perhpas, on the other hand, the year brought more than its share of aches and tears. It may be you recall little to give thanks for. Maybe your troubles would have been too much for many to bear. Then thank God He gave you the fortitude to bear them.

But you know, almost every human has some things— maybe little, but all the more important— for which to be thankful. So set your memory powers to work— scratch that self-commiserating skull— and you'll find you've had them, too.

It might help to recall some of the things those Pilgrim Fathers went through. Whatever your fate, you probably walked a thick plush carpet compared to the rocky road they trod. Hunger, cold, misery was the lot of those Pilgrims, and death heavily decimated their ranks in those first years. Yet to the God whose love had lured them to this tehn-hostile land, they could still take off their hats and express thanks in utter humility for the few blessings He had permitted to befall them.

Thanksgiving is utterly American, the first great gift our founding fathers left to generations yet to be born. Out of the iron of theiloins and the lion of their hearts those old Pilgrims and the other pioneers of those dark, dangerous days procreated generations of stalwarts who literally wrested a nation from the womb of destiny a nation peopled by lusty, brawling, fearless optimists who belived nothing was impossible— a nation that has grown to be the most powerful, the richest in all history.

These were our ancestors, our nation's pride, and what pride we should have in them— and what thankfulness.

Ponder all these things and you must concede no American, no matter how humble, can afford NOT TO BE THANKFUL TODAY'

SONG OF THANKSGIVING

I walked through an orchard when autumn was calling, where the breath of the fruit trees was stronger than wine, and each toss of the wind sent the golden leaves falling like old coins stamped with an ancient design-and I felt that the spoils of the summer were mine.

I drank from the wind as one quaffs from a flagon and caught at the leaves with a miser's quick hand, while my heart sang a song of the harvester's wagon heaped high with the wealth of a bountiful land-with the wealth of a bountiful land-with such joy and thanksgiving, no tongue could command.

HAVE WE ACTED?

Americans, as a nation and as individuals, need not look far for specific reasons to be thankful at this moment in our history.

They can be found in two issues of preeminent national importance, both of which can tell us much more of the real nature of blessings, public and private, than the customary editorial platitudes on our well-being and the prospects of even better to come if only we keep the faith.

We are thinking of the skin-of-our-teeth presidential election and of Vietnam.

From the first, we have emerged with our political processes intact, if shaken, escaping the constitutional crisis that threatened had not these processes by great good fortune produced a certified victor. For this, we can be very thankful indeed.

As for the second, there is at long last the barest glimmer of hope that an agony seemingly unending may be approaching, if haltingly, a conclusion.

The connection and, for this occasion, the significance lie in the roles action and inaction have played in the two developments.

If there is hope in Vietnam, it is because of our action, because of the steps, small and hesitant though they may often seem, that we are taking toward creation of the conditions which permit a conclusion short of annihilation of either side.

In the election, we have less cause to thank our actions for averting crisis than to blame our inaction for having made it an ominous possibility. By failing to overhaul a long-outmoded electoral system, we have been inviting disaster for generations. There could be no better way of offering thanks for deliverance at this time than moving now toward a constitutional amendment spelling out a more direct, democratic and decisive procedure for electing a president.

In public affairs and in private lives, blessings are rarely undeserved. If we wish to be in a position to count any, we should ask ourselves what we have done to bring them about. Have we acted? What more do we have it in our power to do to ensure our own well-being?

It has all been said before, long ago and much more succinctly:

God helps those who help themselves.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — There is no renewal like memory.

No matter how jaded in spirit we may be with the passing moment, by the magic power of recollection we can refresh ourselves in an instant by a mental journey to a time when our world was younger and perhaps fairer of view.

Our lives are but living museums composed of our memories—room after room after room.

Your own museum is pretty well-stocked if you can look back and remember when—

The first thing you did after alighting from a railroad trip was brush the cinders out of your clothing and wash the soot off your face.

You didn't really need an alarm clock to wake up by, because at least one of your neighbors kept chickens and a crowing rooster in his backyard.

Before the suburbs became popular, only poor people lived on the outskirts of town. If your family had money, you lived where the action was—in town.

Most gaffers over 60 years of age carried a buckeye in their pockets to ward off the pangs of "the rheumatiz."

If a back tooth ached, a country dentist didn't bother to treat it. He yanked it out then and there.

Politicians spent most of their campaigns trying to please or placate farmers, because it was the farm vote that decided elections.

You could tell when a lad was beginning to practice shaving with his dad's straight-edge razor—there was usually a bandage on the tip of his nose or the tip of one ear.

In a large family, no matter how hungry the youngsters were, no hand dared reach for the meat platter until Father was seated at the table and had finished saying grace. Then all grabbed at once.

You could travel for days across America by car and never see an auto accident—or the remains of one.

Civilization turned a corner in the small town you lived in on that first epochal Saturday afternoon when there were more automobiles than horses and buggies parked around the courthouse square.

Lovers were sure there wouldnever be a more heart-stirring song than Henry Busse's rendition of "When Day is Done"—and sure enough, there hasn't been.

An enlightened minister was one who would permit his children to play card games for fun although, naturally, he wouldn't stoop to such frivolity himself.

Any schoolteacher seen smoking a cigarette in public could expect to be called before an outraged school board the very next evening to explain her outlandish behavior.

THE MEDICAL REVOLUTION

As time goes, 45 years is something like a speck of dust in an attic. But, in the affairs of man, 45 years can be a mighty important interval. Dr. Dwight L. Wilbur, president elect of the American Medical Association and son of the late Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, former Standford president, who was president of the American Medical Association 45 years ago writes of the developments in medicine since the time of his father.

He says, "More has been learned in medicine in this time than was learned throughout history up to 1923." Even in 1923, surgical treatment was in large part limited to removal of diseased organs, and drugs by present standards were indeed primitive and were confined to simple sedatives, quinine, arsenicals and salvarsan. Medical practice was carried on largely by the solo general practioner. Since 1923, there has been an explosion of knowledge. And with it, again in the words of Dr. Wilbur," ...came the great era of specialization... In 1968 we speak of a health care 'industry.' With almost five million people engaged in it, it is now the third largest in the nation. The amount spent for its 'products' in 1967 is estimated at 50 billion dollars. Manned in large part by nonphysicians, the health care industry has within it some 75 to 100 different categories of workers, known by physicians as 'allied health professions and services.'"

Forty-five years has seen unprecedented advances in the art of medicine and medical science. These advances have brought problems, as well as blessings. One of the gravest is high and rising medical care costs. Dr. Wilbur believes these costs can best be met on the insurance principle, and cites the growth of voluntary health insurance since World War II. "Medical care," he says, "is now commonly looked upon as a basic right. So are food, housing, and clothing. But this does not mean that the government should pay for them if the individual or family is able to do so." The plain fact is that in medicine as elsewhere the fundamental tenet of self-government holds true. The state should only do for the people what they cannot do for themselves.

Of the restaurants I patronize, two display conspiciously in the coatrooms: 'Checking free!'

The tips to the check girls in these places seem to be more generous than elsewhere.

How is this explained?

Apparently, patrons having been told they do not need to tip, are immediately placed in a generous frame of mind. They perceive an opportunity, too, for easy distinction. By tipping they can indicate that they are so accustomed to handling out dimes and quarters that the practice has become a fixed habit. Their vanity is pleased.

Printers' Ink, discussing inverted selling, points out that Elbert Hubbard once wrote for an insurance company an advertisement that produced a large number of inquiries.

Hubbard said to his readers: 'Find out if you can get insurance.' He suggested that a considerable proportion of applicants were undesirable risks, and that a good many men who were ignoring the advantage of insurance couldn't get a policy even if they applied.

When one takes a birdseye view of the task facing our President elect, it looks to be impossible, he is facing what could be a hostile set of lawmakers due to party loyalthy, a high court that has decreed there shall be no mention of God in the teaching of our little one in so called free schools, only anti Christ shall be taught, (Evolution) he is facing a condition where the rich hate the poor and in relabation the poor hate the rich, where the people in the saddle are piling up public debt that can not be paid in short we as a nation can soon be called Satans Garden of Eden, when it takes more money to pay public debts and interest on them than it takes to keep soul and body together, where only consumer pay all taxes interest public saleries and all things, both great and small, question is it too late now have we passed the papoint of no return?

H.L. Hunt Says

ELECTORAL REFORM

Rep. Emanuel Celler (D.-N.Y.) chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, has announced that his committee will hold hearings on electoral reform early next year for the first time since 1951. Senator Birch Bayh (D.-Ind.) chairman of the Senate Judiciary Constitutional Subcommittee, said his panel will resume hearings on proposed constitutional amendments to change the system of electing the President and Vice President.

Senator Bayh supports a plan to abolish the Electoral College in favor of a direct vote of the people. Rep. Celler did not endorse any specific alternative to the present system.

That hearings will be held is good news. But it is to be hoped that they will not be dominated by advocates of the direct vote at the expense of those who favor reforming but retaining the Electoral College. The direct vote would result in federally run elections, dealing a further blow to the rights of the states. Greatly to be preferred is the district plan, under which one presidential elector would be chosen from each congressional district and two electors at large from each state.

This plan would eliminate the inequitable practice of giving a state's entire electoral vote to the candidate who had a plurality of the popular vote. Instead the electoral vote would be divided according to the way te people of the congressional districts voted. The district plan would bring the people closer to the men and women representing their chosen candidates. It would strengthen the representative form of government envisioned by the founders of our Republic. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: It's goodbye not Hello, LBJ's telling White House operators; Congressmen go junketing again; Hotdog headache plagues agriculture department

WASHINGTON--The time has come for the President of the United States to start saying goodbye. Since the White House staff is large, LBJ has arranged to bid goodbye on the instalment plan. To bring in the entire staff at one time would completely disrupt the operations of the White House.

Among the first who were called in for a presidential farewell were the White House telephone operators. Since Lyndon Johnson is without doubt the most telephoning President in history, he had an especially warm feeling for them.

When the light flashes on the White House switchboard indicating that the President has picked up his phone, the operators jump. But lately someone else has been using the President's private phone. Already picking up the LBJ habit, grandson lyn loves to get hold of the telephone keyboard in his grandfather's office and punch it at random.

No other person in the White House--in fact no other person in the United States--would dare maniuplate the telephone keyboard of the president. However, little Lyn, not yet aware of his special prerogative, has a wonderful time punching it.

The President, in saying goodbye to the telephone operators, thanked them for their forbearance with Lyn. He also thanked them for handling his telephone calls at all hours of the night and early morning. He has had the habit of getting up at 3 a.m. to check on developments in South Vietnam. And he has called members of his staff as early as 6 a.m. (even earlier on rare occasions).

"I don't know of anyone who could have handled my calls more efficiently and more patiently than you have," the President told the White House operators. "I shall miss you."

The White House operators, headed by Beverly Cole, said they would miss him too.

BACK TO JUNKETING

Some Congressmen who were extolling the virtues of America in the recent campaign seemed in an awful hurry to get away from America after the election. They are back at their custom of junketing hither and you at taxpayer expense.

One of the plushiest trips of all is taking five Republican and three Democratic members of the House foreign affairs committee to the Far East.

They will visit Japan, Korea, China, Singapore, Malaysia, Indonesia, Australia, and---you guessed it--Hong Kong, that fabulous cut-rate shopping bazaar, which is the biggest stop for all visiting politicians in that part of the world.

Those making the trip are Democrats Edward Roybal of California and L.H. Fountain of North Carolina, and Republicans Ross Adair, Ind., Peter Frelinghuysen, N.J., William Broomfield, Mich., Irving Whalley, Pa., and E. Y. Berry, S.D. Democrat John Tunney of California will accompany the group to Japan only. They departed the U.S. on Nov. 11 and will be gone for four weeks.

The foreign affairs committee explains that the junket will provide the voyagers an opportunity to asses "rapidly mong and far-reaching events" in the Far East. However, the committee fails to add that it also wil provide them with a deluxe vacation most taxpayers could not afford.

HOTDOG HASSLE

Rodney E. Leonard, boss of the agriculture department's consumer and marketing service, is Tussling with one of the toughest problems he has ever faced--whehter to reform that great American institution, the hotdog.

The poultry industry wants to put about 25 per cent chicken meat in it without changing the "Frank" label. The beef cattle producers, like a herd of their own steers, are bellowing their opposition. The consumers will get their say at public hearings soon in Washington, Chicago, Denver and Atlanta.

It's a question that affects the whole nation, for more than 8.5 billion hotdogs are consumed annually in the U.S. Under present regulations, meats can be sold in interstate commerce as "Frankfurters," "Wieners," or "bologna" if they consist of beef, pork, mutton, goat meat, fat and a maximum of 3 ½ per cent cereal or filler.

If chicken is included, the label--not just the fine print--must read "franks and chicken" or "chicken and hotdogs." As a result, poultry producers have been yelling discrimination for years.

Beef packers themselves are somewhat concerned because of the declining sources of protein for hotdogs. Slaughtered dairy cattle is now a principal source, because the meat is less tender than beef cattle and more adaptable to franks. But dairy herds have been declining steadily.

"Taste panel tests show that up to 25 per cent poultry meat can be put into a frankfurter with no discernible difference in taste," Leonard assured this column. "But over that amount causes a different taste characterisitc in the product."

The whole hotdog controversy, however, will probably await the verdictof President Nixon, who is reliably reported to favor meatloaf and enchiladas.

Foreign Intrigue: New teamsters scandals soon to embarrass Walter Reuther and His latest 'crusade'

Washington, D.C.: -- Soon Walter Reuther's face will be red as his hiar. He took a calculated risk in allying himself with the Teamsters in the latest of his chain reaction crusades -- which now may be at the apocalyptic as well as the apoplectic stage.

Soon the eloquent Mr. Reuther will need all his oratorical talents to extricate the crusade from a welter of internationl intrigue, foreign agents, national scandals, prosecutions of alleged conspirators charged with weird financial dealings with monies borrowed from Teamster pension pools, and the muscling of international air freight cargo shippers.

Even those who disagree with the whirlwindish auto union chief -- and these are legion -- do not impugn his honesty. But they do query his judgment in creating a fraternity with the entire Teamsters Brotherhood when even Acting General President Frank (Fitz) Fitzsimmons has been unable to clean up the house left by the imprisoned Jimmy Hoffa.

Fact is that after the first burst of passion over what Fitz called the "marriage," the Teamsters have cooled it. There is virtually no mention of Reuther's Alliance for Labor Action (ALA) in the Teamsters' circles or press. There is just as little in the reports of the recent Teamsters general national board meetings.

Fitz personally has cooled it. Yet on Monday (Nov. 18(, Reuther flew into Washington to confer with the Teamster chief and heat it. Then Reuther flew on to New York for another fling at another crusade via the generosities of the Ford Foundation.

Had he tarried long in Manhattan, he could have learned that it is in the Justice Dept.'s Southern Region of New York that U.S. attorneys are preparing to go to trial on indictments of a number of alleged conspirators, including some of the nation's cruelest hoods.

Some of the defendants are believed by the FBI to be in the Luchese "family" -- in which are such Cosa Nostra stalwarts as Tony Ducks Corallo, Johnny Dio, and others who have pressued unions for decades. Some, such as the ghastly Johnny Dio, have not really had to use much pressure. They have friends -- such as convict Jimmy Hoffa.

These cases should be tried in the courts and not the press. But it will prejudice nothing and no one to report that one of the witnesses is an often phantom character called Herbert Itkin, a sort of triple agent. He has worked for the FBI. He has shilled for Dick Helms' Central Intelligence Agency. He has been a registered foreign agent, listed as a business and investment promotion representative. He is described as a labor lawyer, and he was associated for a while with a large law firm which represents many nations and unions at its lush mid-Manhattan suite.

Itkin already has told authorities that several men, politicians and companies were involved in fraudulent deals. Escrow funds were set up under Itkin's control and allegedly used for "payoffs" to Teamsters officials to help borrow millions from the notorious Central States Southeast and Southwest Areas Pension Fund.

Itkin has testified that the money was paid to enable those seeking mortgages from the pension fund to obtain the money easily. He swore that the escrow accounts were merely a device.

We're dealing here with money poured in by truck owners, at the rate of scores of millions annually, to protect the teamsters and warehousemen in their older years. This is the fund on which teamster retirees must depend for their security when they're no longer able to push those huge vans or drive heavy trucsk over the nation's highways and through tense city streets.

One famed and utterly unimpeachable Justice Dept. prosecutor believes that at least $125,000,000 of the fund's $500 million has gone out on risky loans to hotels, motels, and Las Vegas fun spots.

It will all break open in coming months. News of the scandals will become the conversation pieces wherever international labor leaders gather -- and it should always be remembered that, abroad, the labor leaders often are the government itself.

Already Ruether's alliance with the Teamsters has become a white-hot issue on the international labor front. AFL-CIO President George Meany, low on oratory, high on strategy, has let it be known abroad that he is disturbed at the failure of world labor leaders to chastise Reuther for allying himself with "another organization previously expelled by the AFL-CIO on grounds of corruption."

This is bound to affect Reuther's standing with many governments abroad. Thus it will diminish his influence with laborite prime ministers and presidents and chancellors.

It is bound to gain wider acceptance of the AFL-CIO, which is so bitterly opposed to Reuther's policy of bridges to Moscow and Eastern Europe.

Intrigue will compound intrigue. Governments and movements will be influenced. International politics of the subterranean kind, which make James Bond look like a bakery shop steward, will be affected.

Just watch it unravel.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS:

Do you have your list of things for which you will give thanks tomorrow? Some have long lists, some have short lists but all should have at least one cause for thanksgiving.

We asked one little boy what he had to be thankful for this year - something that he didn't have last year (thinking it would be that he had a new little sister) but he startled me by saying "I'm thankful I've grown some this year and can eat more turkey Thanksgiving." He at least had something to give thanks for.

Let us turn aside from the cares and demands of life express sincere thanks for the so, so many good things that have come our way in the year 1968.

And let's give our thanks sincerely!

THANKSGIVING, 1968

In this hurried world, there are still a few times when we pause and with humility and reverence recall our heritage and give thanks for our spiritual and material blessings. Thanksgiving is such a time. The first Thanksgiving Day was observed by the pilgrims at Plymouth Colony after their first harvest in 1621. President Lincoln in 1864 proclaimed the fourth Thursday of November as Thanksgiving Day, and it has been so since that time.

Legislation is now before Congress which would shift the observance of five of our national holidays to Mondays, on the theory that this would avoid breaking up the working week and provide five clearly defined three-day weekends. Shifts are proposed for Washington's Birthday (to become Presidents Day), Memorial Day, Independence Day, Veterans Day and Thanksgiving. Whatever may be said for this proposal as it affects the rest of these occasions, one may hope that Thanksgiving is not finally included among them. As things now stand, this is quite generally observed as a four-day holiday. A time for families to get together--schools and colleges are closed from Wednesday till Monday. This would be sharply changed if Thanksgiving were just another three-day weekend. For more than a hundred years, the fourth Thursday of every November has been the time for families to serve that reminder of the Lord's bounty--the traditional Thanksgiving Dinner. Changing this day would to many minds detract from its significance. Traditions are an important part of the continuity that lends strength to a people and to a nation. In these times, it would seem well for us to keep as many of them as we can.

REMEMBERING...

"There is one day that is ours...Thanksgiving Day...is the one day that is purely American."

And how right O'Henry was. Thanksgiving is peculiarly and exclusively American- American in origin and tradition, American in observance and thought.

To O'Henry, it was day for going home— the home of childhood— to partake once again of homemade biscuits and to observe that the porch wasn't as far from the old well as it had seemed when he was a boy.

So Thanksgiving is memory, too— richer, happier memory each year one grows older. To you, perhaps, the memory of pumpkin and mincemeat pies, of turkey and church services on a frosty November morn, or the climactic football game on a crisp Thanksgiving afternoon. Or of Mom and Pop, standing 10 feet tall in disciplinary justice, and closer than God when there was need for love and comfort.

Or perhaps your memories differ, but those are the things we recall of those happy Thanksgivings of a half-century ago— except the turkey; our family in those days couldn't afford turkey. Recall in memory only, for all are gone— Mom and Pop, the mince and pumpkin pies. The old home still stands, but no longer warm and big and comforting as it was to the boy of 50 years ago, but somehow shabby, tumbledown and forlorn and, oh, so small.

All gone but the memories to which we'll cling until that time when we'll need memories no more. And so it is with most persons, we'd guess.

But Thanksgiving wasn't designed for old memories alone. Originally it was in remembrance of the blessings of one year— material blessings as well as spiritual ones.

Perhpas you have had much this past year to put gratitude in your heart; if so, thanks-giving is easy.

Perhpas, on the other hand, the year brought more than its share of aches and tears. It may be you recall little to give thanks for. Maybe your troubles would have been too much for many to bear. Then thank God He gave you the fortitude to bear them.

But you know, almost every human has some things— maybe little, but all the more important— for which to be thankful. So set your memory powers to work— scratch that self-commiserating skull— and you'll find you've had them, too.

It might help to recall some of the things those Pilgrim Fathers went through. Whatever your fate, you probably walked a thick plush carpet compared to the rocky road they trod. Hunger, cold, misery was the lot of those Pilgrims, and death heavily decimated their ranks in those first years. Yet to the God whose love had lured them to this tehn-hostile land, they could still take off their hats and express thanks in utter humility for the few blessings He had permitted to befall them.

Thanksgiving is utterly American, the first great gift our founding fathers left to generations yet to be born. Out of the iron of theiloins and the lion of their hearts those old Pilgrims and the other pioneers of those dark, dangerous days procreated generations of stalwarts who literally wrested a nation from the womb of destiny a nation peopled by lusty, brawling, fearless optimists who belived nothing was impossible— a nation that has grown to be the most powerful, the richest in all history.

These were our ancestors, our nation's pride, and what pride we should have in them— and what thankfulness.

Ponder all these things and you must concede no American, no matter how humble, can afford NOT TO BE THANKFUL TODAY'

SONG OF THANKSGIVING

I walked through an orchard when autumn was calling, where the breath of the fruit trees was stronger than wine, and each toss of the wind sent the golden leaves falling like old coins stamped with an ancient design-and I felt that the spoils of the summer were mine.

I drank from the wind as one quaffs from a flagon and caught at the leaves with a miser's quick hand, while my heart sang a song of the harvester's wagon heaped high with the wealth of a bountiful land-with the wealth of a bountiful land-with such joy and thanksgiving, no tongue could command.

HAVE WE ACTED?

Americans, as a nation and as individuals, need not look far for specific reasons to be thankful at this moment in our history.

They can be found in two issues of preeminent national importance, both of which can tell us much more of the real nature of blessings, public and private, than the customary editorial platitudes on our well-being and the prospects of even better to come if only we keep the faith.

We are thinking of the skin-of-our-teeth presidential election and of Vietnam.

From the first, we have emerged with our political processes intact, if shaken, escaping the constitutional crisis that threatened had not these processes by great good fortune produced a certified victor. For this, we can be very thankful indeed.

As for the second, there is at long last the barest glimmer of hope that an agony seemingly unending may be approaching, if haltingly, a conclusion.

The connection and, for this occasion, the significance lie in the roles action and inaction have played in the two developments.

If there is hope in Vietnam, it is because of our action, because of the steps, small and hesitant though they may often seem, that we are taking toward creation of the conditions which permit a conclusion short of annihilation of either side.

In the election, we have less cause to thank our actions for averting crisis than to blame our inaction for having made it an ominous possibility. By failing to overhaul a long-outmoded electoral system, we have been inviting disaster for generations. There could be no better way of offering thanks for deliverance at this time than moving now toward a constitutional amendment spelling out a more direct, democratic and decisive procedure for electing a president.

In public affairs and in private lives, blessings are rarely undeserved. If we wish to be in a position to count any, we should ask ourselves what we have done to bring them about. Have we acted? What more do we have it in our power to do to ensure our own well-being?

It has all been said before, long ago and much more succinctly:

God helps those who help themselves.

NEW YORK (AP) — There is no renewal like memory.

No matter how jaded in spirit we may be with the passing moment, by the magic power of recollection we can refresh ourselves in an instant by a mental journey to a time when our world was younger and perhaps fairer of view.

Our lives are but living museums composed of our memories—room after room after room.

Your own museum is pretty well-stocked if you can look back and remember when—

The first thing you did after alighting from a railroad trip was brush the cinders out of your clothing and wash the soot off your face.

You didn't really need an alarm clock to wake up by, because at least one of your neighbors kept chickens and a crowing rooster in his backyard.

Most gaffers over 60 years of age carried a buckeye in their pockets to ward off the pangs of "the rheumatiz."

If a back tooth ached, a country dentist didn't bother to treat it. He yanked it out then and there.

Politicians spent most of their campaigns trying to please or placate farmers, because it was the farm vote that decided elections.

You could tell when a lad was beginning to practice shaving with his dad's straight-edge razor—there was usually a bandage on the tip of his nose or the tip of one ear.

In a large family, no matter how hungry the youngsters were, no hand dared reach for the meat platter until Father was seated at the table and had finished saying grace. Then all grabbed at once.

An enlightened minister was one who would permit his children to play card games for fun although, naturally, he wouldn't stoop to such frivolity himself.

THE MEDICAL REVOLUTION

As time goes, 45 years is something like a speck of dust in an attic. But, in the affairs of man, 45 years can be a mighty important interval. Dr. Dwight L. Wilbur, president elect of the American Medical Association and son of the late Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, former Standford president, who was president of the American Medical Association 45 years ago writes of the developments in medicine since the time of his father.

He says, "More has been learned in medicine in this time than was learned throughout history up to 1923." Even in 1923, surgical treatment was in large part limited to removal of diseased organs, and drugs by present standards were indeed primitive and were confined to simple sedatives, quinine, arsenicals and salvarsan. Medical practice was carried on largely by the solo general practioner. Since 1923, there has been an explosion of knowledge. And with it, again in the words of Dr. Wilbur," ...came the great era of specialization... In 1968 we speak of a health care 'industry.' With almost five million people engaged in it, it is now the third largest in the nation. The amount spent for its 'products' in 1967 is estimated at 50 billion dollars. Manned in large part by nonphysicians, the health care industry has within it some 75 to 100 different categories of workers, known by physicians as 'allied health professions and services.'"

Forty-five years has seen unprecedented advances in the art of medicine and medical science. These advances have brought problems, as well as blessings. One of the gravest is high and rising medical care costs. Dr. Wilbur believes these costs can best be met on the insurance principle, and cites the growth of voluntary health insurance since World War II. "Medical care," he says, "is now commonly looked upon as a basic right. So are food, housing, and clothing. But this does not mean that the government should pay for them if the individual or family is able to do so." The plain fact is that in medicine as elsewhere the fundamental tenet of self-government holds true. The state should only do for the people what they cannot do for themselves.

Of the restaurants I patronize, two display conspiciously in the coatrooms: 'Checking free!'

The tips to the check girls in these places seem to be more generous than elsewhere.

How is this explained?

Apparently, patrons having been told they do not need to tip, are immediately placed in a generous frame of mind. They perceive an opportunity, too, for easy distinction. By tipping they can indicate that they are so accustomed to handling out dimes and quarters that the practice has become a fixed habit. Their vanity is pleased.

Printers' Ink, discussing inverted selling, points out that Elbert Hubbard once wrote for an insurance company an advertisement that produced a large number of inquiries.

Hubbard said to his readers: 'Find out if you can get insurance.' He suggested that a considerable proportion of applicants were undesirable risks, and that a good many men who were ignoring the advantage of insurance couldn't get a policy even if they applied.

"HOW OLD ARE YOU, sailor?" the license clerk asked the tall uniformed youth in front of the counter.

"How old is your girl friend?"

"16 and a half."

"Sorry, but you'll have to get her parents' consent before I can issue a license."

"And just who," the sailor said motioning to the next man in line, "do you think that is standing there with a shotgun -- Daniel Boone?"

A laborer was shortchanged two dollars in his pay envelope and complained to the foreman.

"You were overpaid two dollars last week and didn't object," the foreman said. 'I know," the laborer said. "I didn't mind overlooking one mistake, but when it happened a second time. I thought it was time to complain.

Doc. Duncan Says

When one takes a birdseye view of the task facing our President elect, it looks to be impossible, he is facing what could be a hostile set of lawmakers due to party loyalthy, a high court that has decreed there shall be no mention of God in the teaching of our little one in so called free schools, only anti Christ shall be taught, (Evolution) he is facing a condition where the rich hate the poor and in relabation the poor hate the rich, where the people in the saddle are piling up public debt that can not be paid in short we as a nation can soon be called Satans Garden of Eden, when it takes more money to pay public debts and interest on them than it takes to keep soul and body together, where only consumer pay all taxes interest public saleries and all things, both great and small, question is it too late now have we passed the papoint of no return?

H.L. Hunt Says

ELECTORAL REFORM

Rep. Emanuel Celler (D.-N.Y.) chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, has announced that his committee will hold hearings on electoral reform early next year for the first time since 1951. Senator Birch Bayh (D.-Ind.) chairman of the Senate Judiciary Constitutional Subcommittee, said his panel will resume hearings on proposed constitutional amendments to change the system of electing the President and Vice President.

Senator Bayh supports a plan to abolish the Electoral College in favor of a direct vote of the people. Rep. Celler did not endorse any specific alternative to the present system.

That hearings will be held is good news. But it is to be hoped that they will not be dominated by advocates of the direct vote at the expense of those who favor reforming but retaining the Electoral College. The direct vote would result in federally run elections, dealing a further blow to the rights of the states. Greatly to be preferred is the district plan, under which one presidential elector would be chosen from each congressional district and two electors at large from each state.

This plan would eliminate the inequitable practice of giving a state's entire electoral vote to the candidate who had a plurality of the popular vote. Instead the electoral vote would be divied according to the way te people of the congressional districts voted. The district plan would bring the people closer to the men and women representing their chosen candidates. It would strengthen the representative form of government envisioned by the founders of our Republic. HLH

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: It's goodbye not Hello, LBJ's telling White House operators; Congressmen go junketing again; Hotdog headache plagues agriculture department

WASHINGTON--The time has come for the President of the United States to start saying goodbye. Since the White House staff is large, LBJ has arranged to bid goodbye on the instalment plan. To bring in the entire staff at one time would completely disrupt the operations of the White House.

Among the first who were called in for a presidential farewell were the White House telephone operators. Since Lyndon Johnson is without doubt the most telephoning President in history, he had an especially warm feeling for them.

When the light flashes on the White House switchboard indicating that the President has picked up his phone, the operators jump. But lately someone else has been using the President's private phone. Already picking up the LBJ habit, grandson lyn loves to get hold of the telephone keyboard in his grandfather's office and punch it at random.

No other person in the White House--in fact no other person in the United States--would dare maniuplate the telephone keyboard of the president. However, little Lyn, not yet aware of his special prerogative, has a wonderful time punching it.

The President, in saying goodbye to the telephone operators, thanked them for their forbearance with Lyn. He also thanked them for handling his telephone calls at all hours of the night and early morning. He has had the habit of getting up at 3 a.m. to check on developments in South Vietnam. And he has called members of his staff as early as 6 a.m. (even earlier on rare occasions).

"I don't know of anyone who could have handled my calls more efficiently and more patiently than you have," the President told the White House operators. "I shall miss you."

The White House operators, headed by Beverly Cole, said they would miss him too.

BACK TO JUNKETING

Some Congressmen who were extolling the virtues of America in the recent campaign seemed in an awful hurry to get away from America after the election. They are back at their custom of junketing hither and you at taxpayer expense.

One of the plushiest trips of all is taking five Republican and three Democratic members of the House foreign affairs committee to the Far East.

They will visit Japan, Korea, China, Singapore, Malaysia, Indonesia, Australia, and---you guessed it--Hong Kong, that fabulous cut-rate shopping bazaar, which is the biggest stop for all visiting politicians in that part of the world.

Those making the trip are Democrats Edward Roybal of California and L.H. Fountain of North Carolina, and Republicans Ross Adair, Ind., Peter Frelinghuysen, N.J., William Broomfield, Mich., Irving Whalley, Pa., and E. Y. Berry, S.D. Democrat John Tunney of California will accompany the group to Japan only. They departed the U.S. on Nov. 11 and will be gone for four weeks.

The foreign affairs committee explains that the junket will provide the voyagers an opportunity to asses "rapidly mong and far-reaching events" in the Far East. However, the committee fails to add that it also wil provide them with a deluxe vacation most taxpayers could not afford.

HOTDOG HASSLE

Rodney E. Leonard, boss of the agriculture department's consumer and marketing service, is Tussling with one of the toughest problems he has ever faced--whehter to reform that great American institution, the hotdog.

The poultry industry wants to put about 25 per cent chicken meat in it without changing the "Frank" label. The beef cattle producers, like a herd of their own steers, are bellowing their opposition. The consumers will get their say at public hearings soon in Washington, Chicago, Denver and Atlanta.

It's a question that affects the whole nation, for more than 8.5 billion hotdogs are consumed annually in the U.S. Under present regulations, meats can be sold in interstate commerce as "Frankfurters," "Wieners," or "bologna" if they consist of beef, pork, mutton, goat meat, fat and a maximum of 3 ½ per cent cereal or filler.

If chicken is included, the label--not just the fine print--must read "franks and chicken" or "chicken and hotdogs." As a result, poultry producers have been yelling discrimination for years.

Beef packers themselves are somewhat concerned because of the declining sources of protein for hotdogs. Slaughtered dairy cattle is now a principal source, because the meat is less tender than beef cattle and more adaptable to franks. But dairy herds have been declining steadily.

"Taste panel tests show that up to 25 per cent poultry meat can be put into a frankfurter with no discernible difference in taste," Leonard assured this column. "But over that amount causes a different taste characterisitc in the product."

The whole hotdog controversy, however, will probably await the verdictof President Nixon, who is reliably reported to favor meatloaf and enchiladas.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Foreign Intrigue: New teamsters scandals soon to embarrass Walter Reuther and His latest 'crusade'

Washington, D.C.: -- Soon Walter Reuther's face will be red as his hiar. He took a calculated risk in allying himself with the Teamsters in the latest of his chain reaction crusades -- which now may be at the apocalyptic as well as the apoplectic stage.

Soon the eloquent Mr. Reuther will need all his oratorical talents to extricate the crusade from a welter of internatioanl intrigue, foreign agents, national scandals, prosecutions of alleged conspirators charged with weird financial dealings with monies borrowed from Teamster pension pools, and the muscling of international air freight cargo shippers.

Even those who disagree with the whirlwindish auto union chief -- and these are legion -- do not impugn his honesty. But they do query his judgment in creating a fraternity with the entire Teamsters Brotherhood when even Acting General President Frank (Fitz) Fitzsimmons has been unable to clean up the house left by the imprisoned Jimmy Hoffa.

Fact is that after the first burst of passion over what Fitz called the "marriage," the Teamsters have cooled it. There is virtually no mention of Reuther's Alliance for Labor Action (ALA) in the Teamsters' circles or press. There is just as little in the reports of the recent Teamsters general national board meetings.

Fitz personally has cooled it. Yet on Monday (Nov. 18(, Reuther flew into Washington to confer with the Teamster chief and heat it. Then Reuther flew on to New York for another fling at another crusade via the generosities of the Ford Foundation.

Had he tarried long in Manhattan, he could have learned that it is in the Justice Dept.'s Southern Region of New York that U.S. attorneys are preparing to go to trial on indictments of a number of alleged conspirators, including some of the nation's cruelest hoods.

Some of the defendants are believed by the FBI to be in the Luchese "family" -- in which are such Cosa Nostra stalwarts as Tony Ducks Corallo, Johnny Dio, and others who have pressued unions for decades. Some, such as the ghastly Johnny Dio, have not really had to use much pressure. They have friends -- such as convict Jimmy Hoffa.

These cases should be tried in the courts and not the press. But it will prejudice nothing and no one to report that one of the witnesses is an often phantom character called Herbert Itkin, a sort of triple agent. He has worked for the FBI. He has shilled for Dick Helms' Central Intelligence Agency. He has been a registered foreign agent, listed as a business and investment promotion representative. He is described as a labor lawyer, and he was associated for a while with a large law firm which represents many nations and unions at its lush mid-Manhattan suite.

Itkin already has told authorities that several men, politicians and companies were involved in fraudulent deals. Escrow funds were set up under Itkin's control and allegedly used for "payoffs" to Teamsters officials to help borrow millions from the notorious Central States Southeast and Southwest Areas Pension Fund.

Itkin has testified that the money was paid to enable those seeking mortgages from the pension fund to obtain the money easily. He swore that the escrow accounts were merely a device.

We're dealing here with money poured in by truck owners, at the rate of scores of millions annually, to protect the teamsters and warehousemen in their older years. This is the fund on which teamster retirees must depend for their security when they're no longer able to push those huge vans or drive heavy trucsk over the nation's highways and through tense city streets.

One famed and utterly unimpeachable Justice Dept. prosecutor believes that at least $125,000,000 of the fund's $500 million has gone out on risky loans to hotels, motels, and Las Vegas fun spots.

It will all break open in coming months. News of the scandals will become the conversation pieces wherever international labor leaders gather -- and it should always be remembered that, abroad, the labor leaders often are the government itself.

Already Ruether's alliance with the Teamsters has become a white-hot issue on the international labor front. AFL-CIO President George Meany, low on oratory, high on strategy, has let it be known abroad that he is disturbed at the failure of world labor leaders to chastise Reuther for allying himself with "another organization previously expelled by the AFL-CIO on grounds of corruption."

This is bound to affect Reuther's standing with many governments abroad. Thus it will diminish his influence with laborite prime ministers and presidents and chancellors.

It is bound to gain wider acceptance of the AFL-CIO, which is so bitterly opposed to Reuther's policy of bridges to Moscow and Eastern Europe.

Intrigue will compound intrigue. Governments and movements will be influenced. International politics of the subterranean kind, which make James Bond look like a bakery shop steward, will be affected.

Just watch it unravel.

Dance Group Offers Variety of Styles

The Colleen Corkre' Dance Co. performed Monday at 8 p.m. to an intimate but enthusiastic audience at the Junior high school auditorium in Charleston.

Headed by Miss Corkre', the troupe presented a very strenuous, fast-moving, program, well balanced with classical, jazz and experimental offerings, augmented by a wide assortment of costumes, hairpieces, lighting effects and an extremely efficient sound system.

Miss Corkre', true to her classical heritage, shone brightest in classic portions of the program. The opening pas de deux from "Sleeping Beauty," which she danced with Orlando Zavorce, was smooth and lyric. The lifts to Zavarce's credit were breathtaking. In "Adieu" and "Night Song", Miss Corkre's solo performance, the pointe work was sure and the turns outstanding.

The audience loved the change of pace of "Twist on an Old Tale," a jazz offering complete with vamp and Charleston, danced by the whole company. "Kaleidoscope", choreographed and performed by Bentley Roton, was a masterpiece of experimental ballet complete with contemporary music and pulsating strobe lights. Mr. Roton's dynamic jazz style completely dominated the mood of the auditorium, giving a scien fiction quality to the piece.

The final offering "For Love of a Waltz," ended the evening on a romantic note, with the whole company fairly bursting with the mood of the Strauss waltz.

On the whole, a delightful evening. The reception afterward provided the whole thing with a warm intimacy.

SHOPPING DAYS 'TIL CHRISTMAS

A Shower For Julie

NEW YORK (AP) — Julie Nixon, who has been asking all her friends for practical wedding gifts, received a pile of kitchen utensils, mops, brooms and drip-dry lingerie at her first bridal shower.

Julie, a 20-year-old brunette with sparkling eyes, greeted with delight her friends' attempts to put the practical gifts in original packages.

Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower, the former first lady and grandmother of Julie's fiance, David, sent a houseplant with bright red flowers and a shiny copper cooking utensil hanging from every branch.

Linda Labarre, a bridesmaid, from Glen Rock, N.J., constructed a model "bride" out of a garbage pail, a broom, a mop, a dustpan, a brand new sheet and other household items.

"Julie had asked me for a mop," Linda said, "and I told her she would get one, but not what she expected. She was really surprised."

Linda said Julie plans to do all her own housework at the couple's spacious new apartment in Northampton, Mass. Both husband and wife will attend classes at nearby Amhorst and Smith colleges next semester.

But not all the presents at the shower, held last weekend in the East Side apartment of Mrs. Elmer H. Bobst, were so domestic.

Julie received an entire outfit by Emilio Pucci, the superchic Italian designer. And Mrs. helen Clay Frick, daughter of the late Henry Clay Frick of the Frick Collection, gave the bride a black tray inlaid with gold pictures of all 36 men who have been elected President, including David's grandfather and Julie's father.

"The lingerie created a sensation," said Linda, "but I'll tell you that none of it was seethrough."

The shower was followed by a formal dinner dance at the Waldorf Towers apartment of Mrs. Edwin I. Hilson, widow of the investment banker. No further prewedding festivities are planned for the immediate future, but Linda predicted at least one more shower before the Dec. 22 wedding.

Dance Group Offers Variety of Styles

The Colleen Corkre' Dance Co. performed Monday at 8 p.m. to an intimate but enthusiastic audience at the Junior high school auditorium in Charleston.

Headed by Miss Corkre', the troupe presented a very strenuous, fast-moving, program, well balanced with classical, jazz and experimental offerings, augmented by a wide assortment of costumes, hairpieces, lighting effects and an extremely efficient sound system.

Miss Corkre', true to her classical heritage, shone brightest in classic portions of the program. The opening pas de deux from "Sleeping Beauty," which she danced with Orlando Zavorce, was smooth and lyric. The lifts to Zavarce's credit were breathtaking. In "Adieu" and "Night Song", Miss Corkre's solo performance, the pointe work was sure and the turns outstanding.

The audience loved the change of pace of "Twist on an Old Tale," a jazz offering complete with vamp and Charleston, danced by the whole company. "Kaleidoscope", choreographed and performed by Bentley Roton, was a masterpiece of experimental ballet complete with contemporary music and pulsating strobe lights. Mr. Roton's dynamic jazz style completely dominated the mood of the auditorium, giving a scien fiction quality to the piece.

The final offering "For Love of a Waltz," ended the evening on a romantic note, with the whole company fairly bursting with the mood of the Strauss waltz.

On the whole, a delightful evening. The reception innvocation afterward provided the whole thing with a warm intimacy.

A Shower For Julie

NEW YORK (AP) — Julie Nixon, who has been asking all her friends for practical wedding gifts, received a pile of kitchen utensils, mops, brooms and drip-dry lingerie at her first bridal shower.

Julie, a 20-year-old brunette with sparkling eyes, greeted with delight her friends' attempts to put the practical gifts in original packages.

Mrs. Mamie Eisenhower, the former first lady and grandmother of Julie's fiance, David, sent a houseplant with bright red flowers and a shiny copper cooking utensil hanging from every branch.

Linda Labarre, a bridesmaid, from Glen Rock, N.J., constructed a model "bride" out of a garbage pail, a broom, a mop, a dustpan, a brand new sheet and other household items.

"Julie had asked me for a mop," Linda said, "and I told her she would get one, but not what she expected. She was really surprised."

Linda said Julie plans to do all her own housework at the couple's spacious new apartment in Northampton, Mass. Both husband and wife will attend classes at nearby Amhorst and Smith colleges next semester.

But not all the presents at the shower, held last weekend in the East Side apartment of Mrs. Elmer H. Bobst, were so domestic.

Julie received an entire outfit by Emilio Pucci, the superchic Italian designer. And Mrs. helen Clay Frick, daughter of the late Henry Clay Frick of the Frick Collection, gave the bride a black tray inlaid with gold pictures of all 36 men who have been elected President, including David's grandfather and Julie's father.

"The lingerie created a sensation," said Linda, "but I'll tell you that none of it was seethrough."

The shower was followed by a formal dinner dance at the Waldorf Towers apartment of Mrs. Edwin I. Hilson, widow of the investment banker. No further prewedding festivities are planned for the immediate future, but Linda predicted at least one more shower before the Dec. 22 wedding.

The big muscle that holds together the two shells of the scallop is the only part of the animal that is eaten.

WARDELL - Utilizing one of the Matthews Pirates' favorite weapons, the zone press, North Pemiscot did away with a four-point Pirate lead, 34-30, going into the second half to surge on to a 69-57 basketball victory.

The Daily Standard's rookie coach of the year for the 1967-68 basketball campaign, David McMahon, gave some kind of pep talk at the half last night that ignited the Mustangs for a scoring spree. It left the Pirates with its 27-game winning string snapped, its first defeat of the season and its fourth in a three-season span.

Other Pirate conquerors were Bloomfield, Oran and Notre Dame.

North Pemiscot, fired up, came out after the intermission and zipped in 11 straight points while holding the Pirates to four shots at their goal. This forced them it into costly turnovers with the press.

Ronnie Womble was the offensive cog in the Mustangs' crushing second half surge. The big 6-4 senior center headed up a 25-point third quarter with 13 points and added four of his teams' 14 tallies in the final period. He had only five points in the first half, having to sit out most of that time in foul trouble.

Matthews had two bad starts, at the start of the encounter with the sixth ranked North Pemiscot quintet and at the beginning of the second half.

Each time, the Mustangs headed out front with quick baskets. The Pirates of Coach Jim Hart, last season's coach of the year, returned in the first half after falling back 6-0, but had little opportunity to cut into the Mustangs' lead in the second half. They hit eight straight shots during one scoring spree and put up an 18-point lead late in the encounter.

Coach Hart, anticipating the talent of the Mustangs, did return Steve McElyea to the lineup, its 6-5 returning center off last year's state championship team. he had been out with an injury since the first game of the season, and returned without practicing for three weeks.

He still is missing another returnee from the title team, Kara Nunn, the Pirates, junior jumping jack, who suffered a severe knee injury in the quarterfinals of the state tournament last season. He will not be able to return to action until Christmas.

Matthews went the first two minutes and five seconds before scoring a field goal the only thing keeping the Pirates in that early start was Carl Bishop's free throws. He scored five of the Pirates' first seven points, putting in the goal that sent his team into the lead with four minutes, 14 seconds left in the period.

It seemed as if Matthews was well on its way to victory. It shut down the offensive machine of North Pemiscot for three minutes and 27 seconds, roaming into a 13-8 lead.

The Mustangs during that spree of scorelessness were getting into foul trouble. Matthews had yet to make a personal.

With one minute and 52 seconds remaining in the first period Clarence Brooks committeed the Pirates' first personal. That point seemed to turn the tide as North Pemiscot went foulless for the next five minutes while the Pirates began making costly fouls.

McElyea's harrassment of the Mustangs on defense was the key to the Pirates' first half lead. The big 6-5 postman blocked six shots in the first hald and shook the Mustang shooters.

Matthews bulit an eight-point lead going into the final seconds of the first quarter, but the Mustangs moved with in three points of the lead, 17-14 at the end of one.

The Pirates retained and maintained that eight-point lead through most of the second period. Late in the game when it turned the ball over to the Mustangs two straight times without a shot and enabled it creep within four points, 34-30, at the half.

"Our press was what put us in the winners' circle," commented coach McMahon. "We hit'em with it through most of the second half, taking advantage of it in the third period when we outscored them (Matthews) 25-12." McMahan went on.

Womble, after missing the final five minutes of the second period, returned to head the Mustangs' offensive surge, that put 11 points on the board before Matthews could get there.

Forming a deadly offensive, the Mustangs added to its lead that reached 18 points once during the encounter.

McElyea, got into foul trouble in the third period, obtaining his fourth personal, mostly against Womble, who the Coach McMahon's words "was going to the hole in the second half in an attempt to get rid of the Pirates big defensive threat."

That's what he did. McElyea returned in the final period with 5:21 left to help bolster the Pirates' defense and rebounding. He lasted only 30 seconds as he drew his fifth personal . . . against Womble.

Matthews hit a dismal 32 per cent for the game while Notre Pemiscot put in 40 per cent of its shots, netting 65 per cent in the third period. Matthews hit at a 22 per cent clip in the final half.

It was a disastrous night for the Pirates and their fans. The junior varsity dropped a 44-37 decision.

Womble finished at the top of North Pemiscot's scoring with 22 points. Two other teammates added double figures to the cause.

Clarence Brooks topped Matthews' scorers with 20 points. Bishop added 16.

The big muscle that holds together the two shells of the scallop is the only part of the animal that is eaten.

WARDELL - Utilizing one of the Matthews Pirates' favorite weapons, the zone press, North Pemiscot did away with a four-point Pirate lead, 34-30, going into the second half to surge on to a 69-57 basketball victory.

The Daily Standard's rookie coach of the year for the 1967-68 basketball campaign, David McMahon, gave some kind of pep talk at the half last night that ignited the Mustangs for a scoring spree. It left the Pirates with its 27-game winning string snapped, its first defeat of the season and its fourth in a three-season span.

Other Pirate conquerors were Bloomfield, Oran and Notre Dame.

North Pemiscot, fired up, came out after the intermission and zipped in 11 straight points while holding the Pirates to four shots at their goal. This forced them it into costly turnovers with the press.

Ronnie Womble was the offensive cog in the Mustangs' crushing second half surge. The big 6-4 senior center headed up a 25-point third quarter with 13 points and added four of his teams' 14 tallies in the final period. He had only five points in the first half, having to sit out most of that time in foul trouble.

Matthews had two bad starts, at the start of the encounter with the sixth ranked North Pemiscot quintet and at the beginning of the second half.

Each time, the Mustangs headed out front with quick baskets. The Pirates of Coach Jim Hart, last season's coach of the year, returned in the first half after falling back 6-0, but had little opportunity to cut into the Mustangs' lead in the second half. They hit eight straight shots during one scoring spree and put up an 18-point lead late in the encounter.

Coach Hart, anticipating the talent of the Mustangs, did return Steve McElyea to the lineup, its 6-5 returning center off last year's state championship team. he had been out with an injury since the first game of the season, and returned without practicing for three weeks.

He still is missing another returnee from the title team, Kara Nunn, the Pirates, junior jumping jack, who suffered a severe knee injury in the quarterfinals of the state tournament last season. He will not be able to return to action until Christmas.

Matthews went the first two minutes and five seconds before scoring a field goal the only thing keeping the Pirates in that early start was Carl Bishop's free throws. He scored five of the Pirates' first seven points, putting in the goal that sent his team into the lead with four minutes, 14 seconds left in the period.

It seemed as if Matthews was well on its way to victory. It shut down the offensive machine of North Pemiscot for three minutes and 27 seconds, roaming into a 13-8 lead.

The Mustangs during that spree of scorelessness were getting into foul trouble. Matthews had yet to make a personal.

With one minute and 52 seconds remaining in the first period Clarence Brooks committeed the Pirates' first personal. That point seemed to turn the tide as North Pemiscot went foulless for the next five minutes while the Pirates began making costly fouls.

McElyea's harrassment of the Mustangs on defense was the key to the Pirates' first half lead. The big 6-5 postman blocked six shots in the first hald and shook the Mustang shooters.

Matthews bulit an eight-point lead going into the final seconds of the first quarter, but the Mustangs moved with in three points of the lead, 17-14 at the end of one.

The Pirates retained and maintained that eight-point lead through most of the second period. Late in the game when it turned the ball over to the Mustangs two straight times without a shot and enabled it creep within four points, 34-30, at the half.

"Our press was what put us in the winners' circle," commented coach McMahon. "We hit'em with it through most of the second half, taking advantage of it in the third period when we outscored them (Matthews) 25-12." McMahan went on.

Womble, after missing the final five minutes of the second period, returned to head the Mustangs' offensive surge, that put 11 points on the board before Matthews could get there.

Forming a deadly offensive, the Mustangs added to its lead that reached 18 points once during the encounter.

McElyea, got into foul trouble in the third period, obtaining his fourth personal, mostly against Womble, who the Coach McMahon's words "was going to the hole in the second half in an attempt to get rid of the Pirates big defensive threat."

That's what he did. McElyea returned in the final period with 5:21 left to help bolster the Pirates' defense and rebounding. He lasted only 30 seconds as he drew his fifth personal . . . against Womble.

Matthews hit a dismal 32 per cent for the game while Notre Pemiscot put in 40 per cent of its shots, netting 65 per cent in the third period. Matthews hit at a 22 per cent clip in the final half.

It was a disastrous night for the Pirates and their fans. The junior varsity dropped a 44-37 decision.

Womble finished at the top of North Pemiscot's scoring with 22 points. Two other teammates added double figures to the cause.

Clarence Brooks topped Matthews' scorers with 20 points. Bishop added 16.

"I've been with him ever since he's been down there," she said, her brown eyes reddened by tears. "And you know what? He's worried about us. That's the kind of man he is."

Mr. and Mrs. Mayle have 16 children.

Their ages range from the twins, Cindy Sue and Linda Lou, who are 4, to Siana, who is 25. There are eight girls and eight boys.

"I have such a wonderful family," the 46-year-old woman said, managing a faint smile. "We are lucky to be as well off as we are."

The Mayles moved to their 56-acre Taylor County farm four years ago when "we didn't know the difference between a cucumber and a pepper," she said. They learned fast enough and now raise chickens, pigs and corn.

Since the explosion, a friend started a drive to keep the Mayles in groceries but it takes a lot to feed 16 children.

"I make four gallons of vegetable soup and it's gone in a day," she said, adding that the family also goes through six pounds of spaghetti at one sitting and two turkeys at another.

Her life hasn't been the same since the explosion.

"I've been raised in a mining camp and I know about all this," she said. "I sleep on the couch each night in case the telephone rings to say he's out of the mine.

"What really hurts is the kids. The other day I came back from the mine and the twins asked me: 'Did they let you see Daddy, Mom?' I just broke down and cried.

"I just know he'll come out of that mine," she said, glancing around the room at her children. "Someone's eyes will be opened when he does and they'll see I've been right all along.

"When he first got trapped down there, the twins wouldn't eat until he got back. But I convinced them he's coming back and they're eating okay now."

"I've had too many things happen to me—too many things," she said sadly. "He's got to come back."

She looked again at her 16 children, some of whom were playing outside.

"We have a wonderful, close family", she said. "That means more to me than anything else. I just thank God for what I've got and pray my husband will come back to us."

Land Battle Bogs Nuclear Project

WESTON, Ill. (AP) — Two years ago high energy physics and big government money coalesced in an obscure farm town 35 expressway miles west of Chicago.

For Chicago and the region around it, the name "Weston" became a symbol of the future.

It was here that the Atomic Energy Commission would build the world's largest nuclear accelerator. With it would come new space-age industry, an increase in jobs and demand for services, added prestige for the area's universities, and—not least of all—a housing development boom.

But, as the frost of November 1968 settles onto the fields around Weston, the state government finds itself locked in a struggle for the 6,800-acre site of what is to be the National Accelerator Laboratory.

Farmers and other landowners have fought a bitter rearguard action against the state's real estate buyers.

Part of the package offered by the state to attract the atom smasher was an agreement to purchase the land then turn it over to the AEC.

Now the AEC is ready to build but only about 2,300 acres, or one third of the parcels that comprise the site, are in government hands.

"We're impatient," says Kennedy Brooks, area manager of the AEC. "We're here to build an accelerator and we want to get going with it."

To get at the property faster, the state is bypassing its private real estate agents to go into local courts with condemnation suits.

The procedure being used gives the government immediate title to the parcel.

But the "quick take," as it is known in real estate argot, forces the government to put up 25 per cent beyond the appraised value of the land—at no interest—until the court determines the sale price.

And that could take years, both sides agree.

Officials of the National Accelerator Laboratory have set up offices in what used to be the village of Weston, which was legally dissolved in June after the last tracts inside the corporate limits were purchased by the state.

Outside the limits though, in the farm country where the vast accelerator will be constructed, nothing is happening.

Chris Feldott, 56, a craggy Illinois farmer whose property is already in the courts, says bluntly:

"They just aren't coming up with enough money.

"My brother, Edwin, and I have been farming this land all our lives. My grandfather farmed this land, and it's been in our family 115 or 120 years."

"The way we figure it, these people are only offering us 50 to 75 per cent of what its worth," he says.

George Serle represents a different kind of property owner. An executive with a large Chicago printing company, he and his wife raise Arabian horses on their property near Weston.

"Sure, I could take their offer and get some sort of a farm dirt cheap 40 or 50 miles west of here," he sayd. "But what good does that do me? I'm 50 years old and that expressway seems to get longer and longer every night."

"Besides," he goes on, "where else am I going to find a limestone base that will take the kind of chemical fertilizer I need to keep up my pasture?"

D.C. Claims L.A. Has Highest Rate Of Forcible Rape

WASHINGTON (AP) — Los Angeles—not Washington—has the highest rate of forcible rapes among the nation's large cities, says the District of Columbia Public Health Department. It ranks Washington 13th.

"This is not to say that women and girls are safe from sexual assaults in Washington," concluded a report released Tuesday, "but that they are safer than in many large cities."

The report, by Dr. Charles R. Hayman and two associates, said there have been "many recent statements in the press" that Washington has the highest rate.

It said figures adapated from FBI reports for 1967 showed 51.1 forcible rapes per 100,000 population for Los Angeles and these rates for other cities:

Baltimore, 48.2; St. Louis, 47; Detroit, 43; Chicago, 39; Pittsburgh, 31.7; New Orleans, 30.7; Buffalo, N.Y., 29.9; San Francisco, 24.1; New York, 23.7; Cincinnati, 23.6; Philadelphia, 1.9; Washington, 21.6; Seattle, 20.1; Boston, 19.1; San Antonio, Tex., 17.7; Cleveland, 16.9; Dallas, 16.4; Houston, 13.5; San Diego, 9.8, and Milwaukee, 6.7.

But the "quick take," as it is known in real estate argot, forces the government to put up 25 per cent beyond the appraised value of the land—at no interest—until the court determines the sale price.

And that could take years, both sides agree.

Officials of the National Accelerator Laboratory have set up offices in what used to be the village of Weston, which was legally dissolved in June after the last tracts inside the corporate limits were purchased by the state.

Outside the limits though, in the farm country where the vast accelerator will be constructed, nothing is happening.

Chris Feldott, 56, a craggy Illinois farmer whose property is already in the courts, says bluntly:

"They just aren't coming up with enough money.

"My brother, Edwin, and I have been farming this land all our lives. My grandfather farmed this land, and it's been in our family 115 or 120 years."

"The way we figure it, these people are only offering us 50 to 75 per cent of what its worth," he says.

George Serle represents a different kind of property owner. An executive with a large Chicago printing company, he and his wife raise Arabian horses on their property near Weston.

"Sure, I could take their offer and get some sort of a farm dirt cheap 40 or 50 miles west of here," he sayd. "But what good does that do me? I'm 50 years old and that expressway seems to get longer and longer every night."

"Besides," he goes on, "where else am I going to find a limestone base that will take the kind of chemical fertilizer I need to keep up my pasture?"

D.C. Claims L.A. Has Highest Rate Of Forcible Rape

WASHINGTON (AP) — Los Angeles—not Washington—has the highest rate of forcible rapes among the nation's large cities, says the District of Columbia Public Health Department. It ranks Washington 13th.

"This is not to say that women and girls are safe from sexual assaults in Washington," concluded a report released Tuesday, "but that they are safer than in many large cities."

The report, by Dr. Charles R. Hayman and two associates, said there have been "many recent statements in the press" that Washington has the highest rate.

It said figures adapated from FBI reports for 1967 showed 51.1 forcible rapes per 100,000 population for Los Angeles and these rates for other cities:

Baltimore, 48.2; St. Louis, 47; Detroit, 43; Chicago, 39; Pittsburgh, 31.7; New Orleans, 30.7; Buffalo, N.Y., 29.9; San Francisco, 24.1; New York, 23.7; Cincinnati, 23.6; Philadelphia, 1.9; Washington, 21.6; Seattle, 20.1; Boston, 19.1; San Antonio, Tex., 17.7; Cleveland, 16.9; Dallas, 16.4; Houston, 13.5; San Diego, 9.8, and Milwaukee, 6.7.

Sato Wins Third Term

TOKYO (AP) — Eisaku Sato won a third term as Japan's prime minister today after pledging to gain the early return of Okinawa and the other Ryukyu Islands from the United States.

He told a news conference after the election he plans to form a new "action Cabinet," possibly over the weekend.

In beating back his strongest opposition since taking office in 1964, the 67-year-old Sato captured 249 votes—21 more than he needed-to retain the presidency of his conservative Liberal Democratic party and with it the premiership.

His nearest rivals in the voting at a party convention were former Foreign Minister Takeo Miki, with 107 votes, and former party Secretary-General Shigesaburo Maeo, who received 95. One of the 454 votes cast went to former Foreign Minister Aiichiro Fujiyama and two were invalid.

Japanese business leaders expressed their pleasure at Sato's re-election and urged him to unify the party for new assaults on problems of national security, student unrest and the rising cost of living.

Leftist opposition leaders immediately charged that Sato would join U.S. President-elect Richard M. Nixon in turning Japan into an anti-Communist base in Asia.

Socialist Secretary-General Saburo Eda predicted Sato would be forced out before his term ends because of collaboration with Nixon, and Democratic Socialist party Chairman Eiichi Nishimura warned the prime minister not to yield to pressure from Nixon.

A Communist party spokesman asserted that Sato would reduce Japan to a position inferior to the United States while strengthening Tokyo's military alliance with Washington.

There were no nominating speeches or demonstrations in the Hibya Public Hall in downtown Tokyo, no hippies outside and almost no applause. Voting was by secret ballot on stage in front of the delegates and spectators.

About 50 radical students assembled to march half a mile to the convention site but were dispersed by police before the march began. The students want the U.S.-Japan security treaty scrapped.

Society of Cincinnati

The Society of the Cincinnati received its name from the fact that its first members, like the Roman leader Cincinnatus, had left their plows to fight for freedom and then returned to peacetime occupations.

Buddha, Jesus Two of Seven Who Preached

SEVEN KINDS OF GOODNESS. By Max Eastman. Horizon. $4.50.

Eastman's theme in this collection of essays is the decline of moral ideals and the need for living "the good life."

He develops his theme by examining the lives of seven men who were "so possessed" with the idea of personal virtue that "they became moral lawgivers for whole epochs or peoples."

They are Buddha, Confucious, Moses, Socrates, Plato, Mohammed and Jesus. Eastman measures them "as teachers of a good life in this world, not as prophets of God or of something that may be imagined to happen in the next."

From this viewpoint, the author makes some really interesting observations. He finds, for example, that Buddha's teachings about truth have a very modern and very Western meaning. He credits Socrates, as the "herald of logic," with taking the first step toward teaching men how to think clearly. He considers Moses as a contradictory law-giver and dictator. His estimate of Mohammed is that "the ecstasy of power corrupted and swallowed into itself the naive aspirations of a good man."

In "Jesus as a Human Teacher" he states that "as they have come down to us" Jesus' teachings contain inconsistencies and "troublous contradictions" between Mosaic threats and gentle advocacy of nonresistance.

In this small book Eastman writes in calm and quiet tones, blending wisdom and humor.

Buddha, Jesus Two of Seven Who Preached

SEVEN KINDS OF GOODNESS. By Max Eastman. Horizon. $4.50.

Eastman's theme in this collection of essays is the decline of moral ideals and the need for living "the good life."

He develops his theme by examining the lives of seven men who were "so possessed" with the idea of personal virtue that "they became moral lawgivers for whole epochs or peoples."

They are Buddha, Confucious, Moses, Socrates, Plato, Mohammed and Jesus. Eastman measures them "as teachers of a good life in this world, not as prophets of God or of something that may be imagined to happen in the next."

From this viewpoint, the author makes some really interesting observations. He finds, for example, that Buddha's teachings about truth have a very modern and very Western meaning. He credits Socrates, as the "herald of logic," with taking the first step toward teaching men how to think clearly. He considers Moses as a contradictory law-giver and dictator. His estimate of Mohammed is that "the ecstasy of power corrupted and swallowed into itself the naive aspirations of a good man."

In "Jesus as a Human Teacher" he states that "as they have come down to us" Jesus' teachings contain inconsistencies and "troublous contradictions" between Mosaic threats and gentle advocacy of nonresistance.

In this small book Eastman writes in calm and quiet tones, blending wisdom and humor.

Hearnes Calls For Increased Farm Exports

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes called Tuesday for increased exports of Missouri farm products and improved transportation of processed products.

The governor's speech was delivered by his press secretary, Jerry L. Bryan, to the second annual Governor's Conference on Agriculture. Hearnes was involved in budget hearings and could not attend the conference.

"Gov. Hearnes is certain," Bryan said, "that Missouri can expand its foreign market opportunities as an individual state and in cooperation with other states, and thus this is a prime area in which to focus our desire for economic improvement."

He noted Missouri exported more than $204 million worth of far products last year, or about 18 per cent of its total production.

"We also know that Missouri cannot confine itself to the role of basic production of raw farm products. For the good of all people involved in agriculture in this state, we must develop a greater future role in the processing of agricultural product. The potential for such processing hinges in large measure on transportation."

Monday, Sen. Nelson B. Tinnan, D-Hornersville, chairman of the senate agriculture committee, announced he would again introduce a bill to permit check-offs to pay for promoting major farm commodities. Such legislation was defeated last year.

Step Taken for Used Car Safety Standards

first step toward federal safety standards for used cars and other vehicles similar to standards already being imposed for new cars has been announced by the Federal Highway Administration.

The agency acknowledged Tuesday the move raises "a host of technical, economic and social issues." It said such standards probably would be enforced through state motor vehicle inspection programs.

Federal Highway Administrator Lowell K. Bridwell invited public comment on proposed guidelines for setting safety standards for such equipment as brakes, steering and suspension systems, lights, and windshield wipers.

No tentative date was given for starting the proposed standards, provided for under the Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 which also authorized setting of the federal safety standards for new cars.

A german schoolmaster named Richard Schirrman opened the first youth hotel in 1910, in an old castle. By 1914 there were 200 hostels in Germany.

About Our Schools

By Lynn Twitty

Likely the most important job of education is to teach people to read. Reading is almost basic to success in any line of activity in today's world. It is not easily taught. While a majority of youngsters learn to read, many of them very well, there are a few who have difficulty in acquiring the skills which are necessary if one is to master this subject.

We are continuously searching for better ways to teach reading in the Sikeston Public Schools. We use the phonetic approach, i.e.: learning pronunciation of words through the basic sounds which the letters of the alphabet or combination of letters make. For most children it is considered effective. We are experimenting on other methods which emphasize the audi-visual approach, using machines such as tape recorders and slide projectors which are so constructed as to allow the children to use these machines at their own rate to develop their reading skills. We find it is very effective with many children.

Some children are handicapped in learning to read because of poor eyesight or because their hearing is not normally acute. Sometimes the visual problem is caused by poor eye coordination, that is, the child has difficulty focusing on the word or is unable to adjust his eye movements to the normal left to right reading pattern. It is not always easy to detect these physical problems. Usually the teacher notices that the child has a problem, he is then referred to reading specialists on our staff who have the "know how" and the equipment to diagnose these difficulties. We then try to prescribe the reading program, usually involving machines, which will best meet the particular child's needs.

Some of these problems will, we believe, be eliminated as a result of the kindergarten program. Here very considerable emphasis is placed on visual perception training and the recognition of particular reading problems.

Bob Miller, Director of Elementary Education, and an exponent of a strong reading program, reports that our standardized testing, which allows us to compare their results with national averages, indicates that we are generally some six months above these national averages in the lower grades to as much as one year above in the upper grades. However, we are still not satisfied and will continue to use every method we possibly can to improve this situation.

Apparently a majority of the voters of Missouri are not too concerned with the education of their children. This is evident when final vote returns indicate that constitutional Amendment I, was defeated at the November 5 election. This amendment would have permitted schools to vote bond issues for the construction of school buildings by a 60% majority rather than the extremely difficult 66 2/3 % margin which is now required. However, we are proud of the fact that the people of Sikeston, as usual, indicated their belief in education by giving this amendment a favorable vote.

It is regrettable that it requires two votes, to one opposed, to build schools while we can elect a governor, or almost all other of our offices and pass almost any legislation by simple majority vote. While it is true that we have never had difficulty in passing a bond issue in Sikeston, in spite of the handicap imposed by the 66 2/3% majority required, this is not true in other reas of the state where schools are badly needed. The city of St. Louis for example, has over 1,500 classrooms, enrolling over 40 children per classroom and has over 100 classrooms where over 50 students are enrolled which is a totally impossible situation. They have had two recent bond issues defeated because of the unreasonable 66 2/3% majority requirement.

We would agree that too much of the tax burden falls on real and personal property, but until the legislature changes this situation by providing more school money from state taxes, there is no other recourse left to boards of education than to try to build schools through the process of raising money by bond issues.

We believe that the people of this community can take some justifiable pride in the strong program of vocational education, training for jobs, which the Board of Education provides. Through vocational education, the needs of the majority of students who can not or have no need to go on to college, can be cared for. Any student can, if they have the desire, learn the skills which will allow him to get and perform in a job, to prepare for jobs ranging from comparatively low skilled occupations, consequently with lower pay but still enough to make a decent living, to those requiring a high degree of proficiency with a higher income. There is no question but that the vocational program is successful as the graduates are getting employment, however, we must not forget that it is still the responsibility of the school to provide education to meet the needs of all students as nearly as can be done. We would point out that equal emphasis is given to the academic program in preparation for college entrance and for general education.

Trigonometry or advanced grammar may be just as important in vocational education for the college-bound student as are auto mechanics or design drafting for the student who wishes to get a job when he finishes high school. The trigonometry may enable the student to prepare for a vocation in engineering as the advanced grammar may assist the college-bound student to eventually become a teacher or to get a job in journalism.

Vocational education, receiving national emphasis at this time and justifiably so, is a bit more glamorous just now. It is in the news. But we must not forget that a sound academic and general education program is the basis for success whether the student quits his formal schooling at the end of high school or goes on to the university.

Our Board of Education tries to keep the curriculum in balance, by providing as nearly as possible for the needs of every student who attends. Naturally, we have our share of failures. We can not provided for the peculiar requirements of some individuals. But generally speaking, the programs of study and the special education services which are available meet the reasonable needs of most.

The music department has recently received a gift from Mrs. Bess Elder which will provide a $10 annual award to the best music student at Middle School for at least a 15-year period. The gift is in memory of Mrs. Elder's daughter. This gesture is appreciated by all of us who are connected with the schools as are the many instances of support which this community gives to education.

School will be dismissed for the Christmas holiday at the end of classes Friday, December 20th and will resume Thursday, January 2, 1969.

Mosquitoes are numerous in lands near the Arctic Circle, despite the cold.

Legal Aid Program Launched

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has launched its second major program in two weeks—this one aimed at providing legal aid for poor people with such problems as divorce, eviction or bill collections.

Officials said the new program primarily will benefit rural welfare recipients but will supplement programs already available to the poor in cities.

The program was authorized by Congress in 1967. HEW Secretary Wilbur J. Cohen said Tuesday it has taken this long to work out details.

Cohen said it would not be possible to estimate cost until states begin applying for funds.

Just last week Cohen announced new regulations, to take full effect next July 1, doing away with investigations of most welfare applicants and substituting instead a simple declaration of need.

The concept previously had stirred some controversy and it will be up to the incoming administration of Richard M. Nixon to oversee its actual start, unless the new administration scraps it beforehand.

Cohen was asked if he expects the legal aid program to survive the change in administrations. His reply was to note the program was carefully prepared and had the endorsement of the American Bar Association.

The legal aid program supplements a $94.5 million program sponsored by the Office of Economic Opportunity, mainly in the cities.

The new program provides up to 80 per cent of the money for state programs.

About Our Schools

By Lynn Twitty

Likely the most important job of education is to teach people to read. Reading is almost basic to success in any line of activity in today's world. It is not easily taught. While a majority of youngsters learn to read, many of them very well, there are a few who have difficulty in acquiring the skills which are necessary if one is to master this subject.

We are continuously searching for better ways to teach reading in the Sikeston Public Schools. We use the phonetic approach, i.e.: learning pronunciation of words through the basic sounds which the letters of the alphabet or combination of letters make. For most children it is considered effective. We are experimenting on other methods which emphasize the audi-visual approach, using machines such as tape recorders and slide projectors which are so constructed as to allow the children to use these machines at their own rate to develop their reading skills. We find it is very effective with many children.

Some children are handicapped in learning to read because of poor eyesight or because their hearing is not normally acute. Sometimes the visual problem is caused by poor eye coordination, that is, the child has difficulty focusing on the word or is unable to adjust his eye movements to the normal left to right reading pattern. It is not always easy to detect these physical problems. Usually the teacher notices that the child has a problem, he is then referred to reading specialists on our staff who have the "know how" and the equipment to diagnose these difficulties. We then try to prescribe the reading program, usually involving machines, which will best meet the particular child's needs.

Some of these problems will, we believe, be eliminated as a result of the kindergarten program. Here very considerable emphasis is placed on visual perception training and the recognition of particular reading problems.

Bob Miller, Director of Elementary Education, and an exponent of a strong reading program, reports that our standardized testing, which allows us to compare their results with national averages, indicates that we are generally some six months above these national averages in the lower grades to as much as one year above in the upper grades. However, we are still not satisfied and will continue to use every method we possibly can to improve this situation.

Apparently a majority of the voters of Missouri are not too concerned with the education of their children. This is evident when final vote returns indicate that constitutional Amendment I, was defeated at the November 5 election. This amendment would have permitted schools to vote bond issues for the construction of school buildings by a 60% majority rather than the extremely difficult 66 2/3 % margin which is now required. However, we are proud of the fact that the people of Sikeston, as usual, indicated their belief in education by giving this amendment a favorable vote.

It is regrettable that it requires two votes, to one opposed, to build schools while we can elect a governor, or almost all other of our offices and pass almost any legislation by simple majority vote. While it is true that we have never had difficulty in passing a bond issue in Sikeston, in spite of the handicap imposed by the 66 2/3% majority required, this is not true in other reas of the state where schools are badly needed. The city of St. Louis for example, has over 1,500 classrooms, enrolling over 40 children per classroom and has over 100 classrooms where over 50 students are enrolled which is a totally impossible situation. They have had two recent bond issues defeated because of the unreasonable 66 2/3% majority requirement.

We would agree that too much of the tax burden falls on real and personal property, but until the legislature changes this situation by providing more school money from state taxes, there is no other recourse left to boards of education than to try to build schools through the process of raising money by bond issues.

We believe that the people of this community can take some justifiable pride in the strong program of vocational education, training for jobs, which the Board of Education provides. Through vocational education, the needs of the majority of students who can not or have no need to go on to college, can be cared for. Any student can, if they have the desire, learn the skills which will allow him to get and perform in a job, to prepare for jobs ranging from comparatively low skilled occupations, consequently with lower pay but still enough to make a decent living, to those requiring a high degree of proficiency with a higher income. There is no question but that the vocational program is successful as the graduates are getting employment, however, we must not forget that it is still the responsibility of the school to provide education to meet the needs of all students as nearly as can be done. We would point out that equal emphasis is given to the academic program in preparation for college entrance and for general education.

Trigonometry or advanced grammar may be just as important in vocational education for the college-bound student as are auto mechanics or design drafting for the student who wishes to get a job when he finishes high school. The trigonometry may enable the student to prepare for a vocation in engineering as the advanced grammar may assist the college-bound student to eventually become a teacher or to get a job in journalism.

Vocational education, receiving national emphasis at this time and justifiably so, is a bit more glamorous just now. It is in the news. But we must not forget that a sound academic and general education program is the basis for success whether the student quits his formal schooling at the end of high school or goes on to the university.

Our Board of Education tries to keep the curriculum in balance, by providing as nearly as possible for the needs of every student who attends. Naturally, we have our share of failures. We can not provided for the peculiar requirements of some individuals. But generally speaking, the programs of study and the special education services which are available meet the reasonable needs of most.

The music department has recently received a gift from Mrs. Bess Elder which will provide a $10 annual award to the best music student at Middle School for at least a 15-year period. The gift is in memory of Mrs. Elder's daughter. This gesture is appreciated by all of us who are connected with the schools as are the many instances of support which this community gives to education.

School will be dismissed for the Christmas holiday at the end of classes Friday, December 20th and will resume Thursday, January 2, 1969.

Legal Aid Program Launched

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has launched its second major program in two weeks—this one aimed at providing legal aid for poor people with such problems as divorce, eviction or bill collections.

Officials said the new program primarily will benefit rural welfare recipients but will supplement programs already available to the poor in cities.

The program was authorized by Congress in 1967. HEW Secretary Wilbur J. Cohen said Tuesday it has taken this long to work out details.

Cohen said it would not be possible to estimate cost until states begin applying for funds.

Just last week Cohen announced new regulations, to take full effect next July 1, doing away with investigations of most welfare applicants and substituting instead a simple declaration of need.

The concept previously had stirred some controversy and it will be up to the incoming administration of Richard M. Nixon to oversee its actual start, unless the new administration scraps it beforehand.

Cohen was asked if he expects the legal aid program to survive the change in administrations. His reply was to note the program was carefully prepared and had the endorsement of the American Bar Association.

The legal aid program supplements a $94.5 million program sponsored by the Office of Economic Opportunity, mainly in the cities.

The new program provides up to 80 per cent of the money for state programs.

State Colleges Approve Budget Treatment

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—A spokesman for Missouri's five state colleges and Lincoln University told Gov. Warren E. Hearnes Tuesday "we think we've been treated very fairly" in the appropriation recommendations of the budget director for the coming fiscal year.

Dr. Arthur L. Mallory, president of Southwest Missouri state College, Springfield, spokesman for the colleges, told the governor "our major purpose in coming here is to say 'thank you.'"

The presidents of the other schools, seated behind Mallory at the governor's budget appeal hearing, nodded agreement.

Dr. Mallory did suggest two changes from the recommendations of the budget director and comptroller, John C. Vaughn— more money for salaries and for expanding the libraries.

He said if the allowance for pay increases could be raised from the 5 per cent across the board recommended by Vaughn to 7 per cent the schools could continue to be competitive in attracting necessary faculty members.

And if the money available for additions to the six school libraries could be boosted by $506,000 that would permit addition of some 67,000 needed volumes.

The school spokesman also discussed some $34.6 million in priority building needs but Vaughn had not recommended any outlay for capital improvements at any state institutions. He indicated last week it would be up to the governor and the Legislature to decide how building money should be obtained—either by a building bond issue or by a major tax increase.

Besides his own institution, Dr. Mallory also spoke for Northeast Missouri State at Kirksville, Northwest at Maryville, Central at Warrensburg, Southeast at Cape Girardeau and Lincoln University at Jefferson City.

Bunny Bread Head Guest Speaker For Charleston Chamber of Commerce

CHARLESTON - Jack Lewis, president of Lewis Brothers Bakeries of Anna, Ill., gave a pep talk to members of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce Thursday night at the annual Chamber banquet held in the CHS student commons.

LEWIS, whose firm produces Bunny Bread, spoke on the theme "You Don't Have to Be Big to Be Good."

Listing the many resources of the Southeast Missouri, Southern Illinois, Western Kentucky area. Lewis said we have timber, limestone quarries, lead and zinc, oil wells, 95 per cent of the nation's fluorspar, and abundance of water, interstate highways, good landing fields, and above all, he said, the area has good people, who will give a good day's work for a good day's pay.

Someday, he predicted, there will be a "little Pittsburgh" up the Mississippi River because of these resources. Within 10 years, he said, as soon as the way in Vietnam is over, there will be helicopter shuttle service between our area's small towns and St. Louis, replacing the railroad passenger service which is all but gone already.

Because of this, Lewis said he is not pessimistic about the future of business in this area. "People tell me they can't make any money in business here," Lewis said. "I tell them to look in the mirror and take a good look at their worst competitor." There is too much "I can't" the 1968 National Small Businessman of the Year said.

The cigarette industry was hard hit by government requirements that television show free spots, about lung cancer. The industry fought back with a creative advertising campaign, and has recovered its market position. "They didn't just quit," Lewis said. Lewis had several slogans about which he built his presentation, Among them:

If you're in a rut, be sure it's going in the right direction.

You either grow, or you go.

When you are through changing, you are through.

The 'right time' for making a change is when you make it.

The man in the mirros is your worst competitor.

You must do more business every day to stay in business.

WE LIVE IN a constantly changing world, Lewis said. Look what has happened to the railroad passenger train, to the moive theatre, and to the hotel,. Markets in the United States are constantly growing. We are a nation on the move, he said.

Too often he said, we find that managers are trying to run a 1968 business with 1950 equipment. "Keep your business as modern as your automobile," Lewis advised, "your competition does."

To those who complain that their fellow townspeople do not patrolnize their stores, Mr. Lewis said "The roads all run in two directions. That's why there's a black line down the middle. Your customers do not owe you a thing.

"If people do not buy at home." he said, "it's because of one of two reasons: Either you are not telling the customer what you have to sell through advertising, or you are not selling what the customer wants to buy."

USING HIS OWN business as an example, Lewis said he spends $400,000 per year in the Midwest on advertising to promote his bread products. His gross sales are over $10 million, so the advertising expense amounts to about four per cent of sales.

He attributed the growth of Bunny Bread—from a firm doing $960,000 gross business in 1952 to a $10 million business in 1967— to advertising and to "taking over sick bakeries, using the same people, training and working with them, and making them profitable."

"They are good people," he said, "they just need to be turned around."

Chamber President Morris Gaines preseded at the banquet, introducing the head table guests, including Mayor and Mrs. E. Paul Jackson, Brown Shoe Manager and Mrs. L.L. Clough, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, the Rev. and and Mrs. Larry Long, and Mr. and Mrs. Manford Cox. Mrs. Cox is the 1968 woman of the year.

Gaines announced the nominating committee to select 12 nominees for four positions on the Chamber board of directors. The committee includes W. R. Chron, Charles L. Brink Jr., and E. Paul Jackson.

The December meeting will be the agriculture meeting with presentation of the osybean hield contest awards and memberships in the 55-bushel soybean club.

Decorations for the banquet was handled by Miss Frances Daniel, Mrs. Richard Saliba, Mrs. E.R. Putnam, Mrs. Bill Knight, Mrs. Jim Moran, and Mrs. Layton Pickard.

Musical entertainment was provided by vocalist Mrs. Don Evans, accompanied by Mrs. Carl Muench, and dinner music was by Matt Bryant at the organ.

State Colleges Approve Budget Treatment

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—A spokesman for Missouri's five state colleges and Lincoln University told Gov. Warren E. Hearnes Tuesday "we think we've been treated very fairly" in the appropriation recommendations of the budget director for the coming fiscal year.

Dr. Arthur L. Mallory, president of Southwest Missouri state College, Springfield, spokesman for the colleges, told the governor "our major purpose in coming here is to say 'thank you.'"

The presidents of the other schools, seated behind Mallory at the governor's budget appeal hearing, nodded agreement.

Dr. Mallory did suggest two changes from the recommendations of the budget director and comptroller, John C. Vaughn— more money for salaries and for expanding the libraries.

He said if the allowance for pay increases could be raised from the 5 per cent across the board recommended by Vaughn to 7 per cent the schools could continue to be competitive in attracting necessary faculty members.

And if the money available for additions to the six school libraries could be boosted by $506,000 that would permit addition of some 67,000 needed volumes.

The school spokesman also discussed some $34.6 million in priority building needs but Vaughn had not recommended any outlay for capital improvements at any state institutions. He indicated last week it would be up to the governor and the Legislature to decide how building money should be obtained — either by a building bond issue or by a major tax increase.

Besides his own institution, Dr. Mallory also spoke for Northeast Missouri State at Kirksville, Northwest at Maryville, Central at Warrensburg, Southeast at Cape Girardeau and Lincoln University at Jefferson City.

Bunny Bread Head Guest Speaker For Charleston Chamber of Commerce

CHARLESTON - Jack Lewis, president of Lewis Brothers Bakeries of Anna, Ill., gave a pep talk to members of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce Thursday night at the annual Chamber banquet held in the CHS student commons.

LEWIS, whose firm produces Bunny Bread, spoke on the theme "You Don't Have to Be Big to Be Good."

Listing the many resources of the Southeast Missouri, Southern Illinois, Western Kentucky area. Lewis said we have timber, limestone quarries, lead and zinc, oil wells, 95 per cent of the nation's fluorspar, and abundance of water, interstate highways, good landing fields, and above all, he said, the area has good people, who will give a good day's work for a good day's pay.

Someday, he predicted, there will be a "little Pittsburgh" up the Mississippi River because of these resources. Within 10 years, he said, as soon as the way in Vietnam is over, there will be helicopter shuttle service between our area's small towns and St. Louis, replacing the railroad passenger service which is all but gone already.

Because of this, Lewis said he is not pessimistic about the future of business in this area. "People tell me they can't make any money in business here," Lewis said. "I tell them to look in the mirror and take a good look at their worst competitor." There is too much "I can't" the 1968 National Small Businessman of the Year said.

The cigarette industry was hard hit by government requirements that television show free spots, about lung cancer. The industry fought back with a creative advertising campaign, and has recovered its market position. "They didn't just quit," Lewis said. Lewis had several slogans about which he built his presentation, Among them:

Ann Landers

Drunken Husband Absent-Thanksgiving Happy for Wife

Dear Ann Landers: Tomorrow is Thanksgiving and it will be the happiest Thanksgiving my little family has had in 10 years. Why? Because my husband died five weeks ago. He finally drank himself to death.

For once I will sit down with my four children and say grace and there will be peace in the house. No longer will they look at me with terrified eyes and ask why Daddy is screaming and breaking things. No longer will I have to take them to the neighbor's in the middle of the night to protect them against the brutality of a man who behaved like a ferocious animal when the whiskey got to him.

I have always worked to support the family. How much easier it will be with no liquor bills, no court costs, no attorney's fees, no ambulance bills.

It's heavenly to be able to go to sleep at night instead of walking the floor wondering if my husband has passed out in a bar or in some tramp's apartment. You can't imagine the feeling of shame when I got those 3:00 a.m. telephone calls asking me to "come and get him."

Yes, Ann, this Thanksgiving will be my happiest, and I had to tell someone. And you are the only one I dare tell. Thanks for listening. --- FREE AT LAST

Dear Free: I'm glad I provided you with an opportunity to express yourself. And now that you have, I hope you will replace the bitterness in your heart with little compassion.

Dear Ann: When people mistreat animals they can be reported to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. To whom do I report a man who refuses to allow his wife to go to a doctor because he says all doctors are quacks and if they can't find anything wrong they will make up something so they can send a big bill.

The victim is my neighbor and she asked me to write for an answer. Please provide one. --- LADY NEXT DOOR

Dear Lady: Animals must be protected because they can't protect themselves. A woman who is so completely dominated by her husband that she would allow him to keep her from going to a doctor when she is ill is beyond my reach -- and yours, too. She should speak to her clergyman. (P.S. She may be out of his reach, too.)

Dear Ann Landers: I'm one of those unfortunate guys who can't carry a tune. I know I sing off key, but I love to join in when my Rotary buddies sing "Harvest Moon" and "Down by the Old Mill Stream." Last night at a lodge meeting we all sang my favorite, "God Bless America." I think maybe I was singing louder than usual. My wife yanked my sleeve and yelled in my ear, "If you don't shut up I'm leaving." I'd like your opinion of this. --- THE TIN EAR

Dear Ear: Your wife is attaching too much importance to your singing ability -- or lack of it. No one expects an ordinary, everyday man to sound like Robert Goulet. I suggest that you cut down on the volume a little, but please don't stop singing. It's good for you.

How will you know when the real thing comes along? Ask Ann Landers. Send for her booklet "Love Or Sex And How To Tell The Difference." Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

If You Were the Judge

Drink Eased Pain and Produced Compensation

After an accident on the job, Herman's head could still sit on one end of his backbone, but poor Herman could no longer stand to sit on the other end. In fact, he began guzzling whiskey to kill the pain. The result? While Herman's back problem ultimately cleared up over a period of seven years, for which he received workmen's compensation benefits, it left him with a drinking problem. And, as a liquored employee, while he was always very jolly, Herman wasn't very efficient. Consequently, he was fired from his job. Without ado, he claimed a workmen's compensation award on the grounds that his drinking problem was a job incurred injury.

"You must be kidding," he was told. "A guy can't blame his boozing on his job. If he could, every employee in the United States would soon be zig-zagging his way to work."

"But if it wasn't for my back injury," retorted Herman, "I'd never have fallen prey to the stuff. Before the accident, I was at best a social drinker."

Intent upon collecting an award, Herman took his claim to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you grant Herman a workmen's compensation award for his drinking problem?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! He held that once a casual connection between a driking problem and a compensible injury is factually established, subsequent disability caused by the drinking problem is compensible. In this case, there was a casual connection between Herman's back injury, for which he received compensation and his drinking problem.

How to Retard Inflation

ANOTHER tax increase was recently passed as a means of retarding inflation. We are told that it will siphon off purchasing power, and so reduce the demand for goods and services. Lessened demand, it is said, will tend to stop further advance in prices.

Dr. Kershner

We have explained again and again that this thinking is erroneous. The tax increase will not produce the desired result for two main reasons. If the people pay out more money in taxes, of course their purchasing power is reduced by that amount, but, the purchasing power of government is increased by the same amount. We know that government will spend the increased income promptly and that the effect will be just as inflationary as if the people spent it themselves. The truth is that it will be more so, for the people would save a certain portion of this money, but government will save none of it.

If government should use the extra tax money to reduce the public debt, it would indeed tend to retard inflation, but there is no hope that government would so use any part of its tax revenue in the foreseeable future.

If people were allowed to retain this money, they would spend it for the things they want and would undoubtedly save a portion of it. On the other hand, when government does the spending, it may or may not be in accordance with the wishes of the people. All of us will agree, I think, that we much prefer to spend our own money rather than to have government spend it for us.

The second main reason why a tax increase will not retard inflation is that union pressure for increased wages will not abate just because demand in certain lines might be reduced. The history of union demands in recent years shows no respect for an employer's lack of ability to meet the increases. For instance, the subways in New York have long been losing money, but that does not stop the transport workers union from demanding higher and higher pay. The post office always runs at a deficit, but postal workers demand and receive regular increases.

The way to retard inflation is to stop increasing the quantity of money (last year's increase was $34 billion), to cut down spending and to balance the budget. To be sure the war makes it more difficult to do this, but civilian spending far exceeds military spending and is increasing at a far more rapid rate.

The victim is my neighbor and she asked me to write for an answer. Please provide one. --- LADY NEXT DOOR

Dear Lady: Animals must be protected because they can't protect themselves. A woman who is so completely dominated by her husband that she would allow him to keep her from going to a doctor when she is ill is beyond my reach -- and yours, too. She should speak to her clergyman. (P.S. She may be out of his reach, too.)

Dear Ann Landers: I'm one of those unfortunate guys who can't carry a tune. I know I sing off key, but I love to join in when my Rotary buddies sing "Harvest Moon" and "Down by the Old Mill Stream. Last night at a lodge meeting we all sang my favorite, "God Bless America." I think maybe I was singing louder than usual. My wife yanked my sleeve and yelled in my ear, "If you don't shut up I'm leaving." I'd like your opinion of this. --- THE TIN EAR

Dear Ear: Your wife is attaching too much importance to your singing ability -- or lack of it. No one expects an ordinary, everyday man to sound like Robert Goulet. I suggest that you cut down on the volume a little, but please don't stop singing. It's good for you.

How will you know when the real thing comes along? Ask Ann Landers. Send for her booklet "Love Or Sex And How To Tell The Difference." Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

If You Were the Judge

Drink Eased Pain and Produced Compensation

After an accident on the job, Herman's head could still sit on one end of his backbone, but poor Herman could no longer stand to sit on the other end. In fact, he began guzzling whiskey to kill the pain. The result? While Herman's back problem ultimately cleared up over a period of seven years, for which he received workmen's compensation benefits, it left him with a drinking problem. And, as a liquored employee, while he was always very jolly, Herman wasn't very efficient. Consequently, he was fired from his job. Without ado, he claimed a workmen's compensation award on the grounds that his drinking problem was a job incurred injury.

"You must be kidding," he was told. "A guy can't blame his boozing on his job. If he could, every employee in the United States would soon be zig-zagging his way to work."

"But if it wasn't for my back injury," retorted Herman, "I'd never have fallen prey to the stuff. Before the accident, I was at best a social drinker."

Intent upon collecting an award, Herman took his claim to court.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you grant Herman a workmen's compensation award for his drinking problem?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! He held that once a casual connection between a driking problem and a compensible injury is factually established, subsequent disability caused by the drinking problem is compensible. In this case, there was a casual connection between Herman's back injury, for which he received compensation and his drinking problem.

ANOTHER tax increase was recently passed as a means of retarding inflation. We are told that it will siphon off purchasing power, and so reduce the demand for goods and services. Lessened demand, it is said, will tend to stop further advance in prices.

We have explained again and again that this thinking is erroneous. The tax increase will not produce the desired result for two main reasons. If the people pay out more money in taxes, of course their purchasing power is reduced by that amount, but, the purchasing power of government is increased by the same amount. We know that government will spend the increased income promptly and that the effect will be just as inflationary as if the people spent it themselves. The truth is that it will be more so, for the people would save a certain portion of this money, but government will save none of it.

If government should use the extra tax money to reduce the public debt, it would indeed tend to retard inflation, but there is no hope that government would so use any part of its tax revenue in the foreseeable future.

If people were allowed to retain this money, they would spend it for the things they want and would undoubtedly save a portion of it. On the other hand, when government does the spending, it may or may not be in accordance with the wishes of the people. All of us will agree, I think, that we much prefer to spend our own money rather than to have government spend it for us.

The second main reason why a tax increase will not retard inflation is that union pressure for increased wages will not abate just because demand in certain lines might be reduced. The history of union demands in recent years shows no respect for an employer's lack of ability to meet the increases. For instance, the subways in New York have long been losing money, but that does not stop the transport workers union from demanding higher and higher pay. The post office always runs at a deficit, but postal workers demand and receive regular increases.

The way to retard inflation is to stop increasing the quantity of money (last year's increase was $34 billion), to cut down spending and to balance the budget. To be sure the war makes it more difficult to do this, but civilian spending far exceeds military spending and is increasing at a far more rapid rate.

The "missile gap" issue which played a major role in the 1960 presidential campaign has come up again in 1968 under a new name—"security gap." Disputing Republican assertions that the Democratic administration permitted U.S. nuclear superiority over the Soviet Union to decline, Defense Secretary Clark Clifford released Pentagon estimates of relative U.S. and Soviet strength in October, 1967, and October, 1968, which, he said, show that the United States continues to hold "substantial military superiority."

The "missile gap" issue which played a major role in the 1960 presidential campaign has come up again in 1968 under a new name—"security gap." Disputing Republican assertions that the Democratic administration permitted U.S. nuclear superiority over the Soviet Union to decline, Defense Secretary Clark Clifford released Pentagon estimates of relative U.S. and Soviet strength in October, 1967, and October, 1968, which, he said, show that the United States continues to hold "substantial military superiority."

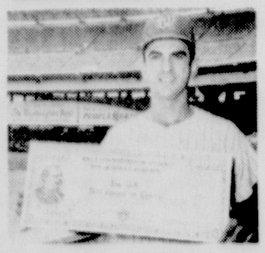
WITH GUESTS IN MIND—Even a small living room (8 x 9 feet) can accommodate overnight guests for the holidays with this versatile sofa bed. Covered in wide wale black cotton corduroy, it fits in nicely with a bold color scheme of red, black, and white. Colors in the poppy-printed wallpaper are echoed in white corduroy draperies with red trim, and extra seating is provided by large square floor pillows in red and black corduroy. Photographed at the Chicago Merchandise Mart.

BAGGED BY POLICE, a 5-foot-long alligator is led by W. E. Trappman down a street in St. Petersburg, Fla. Trappman lassoed the 'gator after it was discovered sleeping peacefully on the porch of a local resident. The tough-skinned creature was turned loose in Lake Maggiore, a more suitable habitat.



"DON'T LET CHRISTMAS throw you a curve," says Camilo Pascual, Washington Senators pitcher. "Choose the gift that keeps on giving—United States Savings Bonds. You'll find that it's one sure way to give everyone exactly what he wanted."

HOLIDAY SEASON countdown began early in Paris when a department store started dressing up for the occasion. Instead of the usual Christmas themes, the store is following the space-age influence with a huge rocket embracing a corner of the building.

PANTS PLUS — Holiday fashion's new "evening uniform" is the pants-plus-dress look. Here ornately patterned cotton lace shapes a short dress with sash tie and flaring pants. By Joy Stevens of California.

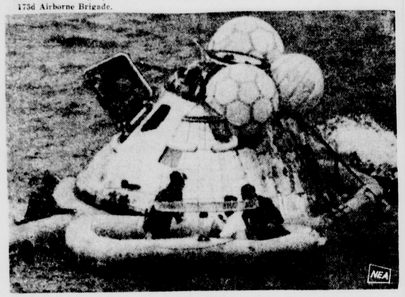
"GOD IS MY POINT MAN" — Sfc James Fenling of Brooklyn, N.Y., catches a few winks during operations near Bong Son. Sergeant Fealing is a member of the 173d Airborne Brigade.



SUCCESSFUL END of a successful mission finds astronaut Walter Cunningham in a liferaft waiting for Donn Eisele and Walter Schirra to emerge from their Apollo 7 spacecraft after a flawless 11 days in space pointing the way toward a manned lunar orbit on the upcoming Apollo 8 flight.

HOW TO SAY 'THANKS' IN SIX LANGUAGES

BRAZIL

"Muito obrigado," says this grateful son of Brazil, where the language recalls Portugal's 16th century colonization. Two million Brazilians benefit from the Thanksgiving Clothing Campaign.

NEPAL

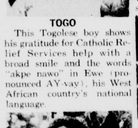
HONG KONG

Confucius said it in Mandarin. But in Hong Kong, where these folks are among 51,700 children helped by the Thanksgiving Clothing Campaign, the dialect is Cantonese — and "Tor buch" spells "thanks."

VIETNAM

Two little words in Vietnamese — "cam on" — speak volumes for these war victims. Catholic Relief Services handles 95 per cent of all relief supplies that voluntary agencies distribute in Vietnam.



TOGO

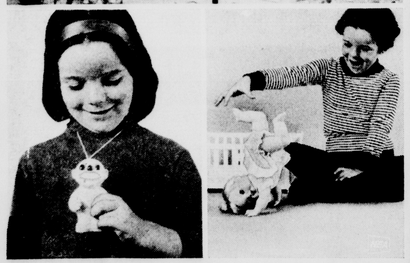
MEXICO

Three happy Mexican faces and a big "gracias" in triplicate reward Americans who take used clothes to the neighborhood Catholic church during the Bishops' Thanksgiving Clothing Campaign.

During November, we can show our thanks by bringing a bundle of used clothing to the nearest Catholic church.



Each year dolls "do" things. And this season is no exception. Baby Grow-a-tooth (top) does just that. She wiggles her arms, sits up and plays with her crib gymnasium, takes her pacifier. When it has been removed, she has grown a tooth. Loonie Lites (lower left) are fast becoming a fad among youngsters. The 3½-inch vinyl figure can be worn as a necklace or bracelet charm. When its tummy is pressed, its eyes, nose and teeth light up. Little charmer (lower right) is constructed so that her head moves in all directions. She can do backbends and handstands, too.

HIGHLIGHTS AND SIDELIGHTS FROM YOUR STATE CAPITOL

JEFFERSON CITY — Democratic and Republican legislators are organizing for the opening of the 75th General Assembly Jan. 8th and during the past two week have met and chosen party leaders.

House Democrats met Nov. 18 and chose their majority party officers.

James E. Godfrey, D-St. Louis, was re-elected as Speaker of the House for his second two-year term.

Patrick J. Hickey, D-St. Ann, was re-elected by his fellow House Democrats as Speaker pro tem and Richard J. Rabbitt, D-St. Louis, was chosen again as majority floor leader in the lower house.

Charles S. Broomfield, D-Kansas City, was elected assistant majority whip and replaces Don Hancock, D-Doniphan. Heckemeyer, D-St. Louis, is the majority whip and replaces Don Hancock, D-Doniphan. Heckemeyer is the only outstate Missourian named to a party office.

Frank Mazzuca, D-St. Louis, is the new majority caucus chairman, replacing James Troupe Sr., D-St. Louis, and Mrs. Gladys Marric, D-Kansas City, was elected caucus secretary, replacing Mrs. DeVerne Calloway, St. Louis.

House Republicans held their caucus two weeks ago and chose R.J. King, R-Clayton, again as the minority floor leader. C.M. Basaman, R-Hermann, is the new GOP assistant floor leader, replacing Robert E. Young, R-Carthage.

John T. Russell, R-Florissant, was re-elected minority whip. Minority caucus chairmanship duties remain the responsibility of Vernon Betz, R-Trenton. George W. Parker, R-Columbia, was also re-elected caucus secretary.

Senate Democrats have changed their legislative leaders a Sen A. Basey D-Columbia was elected majority floor leader, defeating Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty.

Sen. Earl R. Blackwell D-Hillsboro, succeeds Sen. John Joynt, D-St. Louis as Senate president pro tem. Joynt did not seek re-election to the post. Sen. Joseph A. Bauer, D-St. Louis, was re-elected Senate secretary.

Both Vanlandingham and Blackwell are members of a Senate Democratic clique called the "Yonng Turks."

During a recent interview, Vanlandingham attributed the ousting of the "old guard" to the influx of younger blood into the Senate. Capitol observes say there should be no radical changes in the Senate leadership, rather the "young Turks" will stress more separation between the legislative and executive departments. Sen. Blackwell said he differs with the concept that the governor should dominate the General Assembly.

Close observers expect the new controlling group of Senate Democrats will oppose many of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes legislative proposals.

Vanlandingham said the main issues confronting the Senate and House will be how to raise money for state needs in schools, higher education, highway construction and other areas.

The Columbia Democrat said also they he assumed the governor's legislative proposals would include a 50-50 plan for state and local level school financing and some type of toll road proposal.

Toll road legislation stands a good chance of getting through the legislature, Vanlandingham said.

Blackwell predicted that Senate Democrats will use the caucus to a much greater extent than in the past.

Incoming Lt. Gov. W.S. "Bill" Morris of Kansas City will continue to exercise previous powers held by the presiding officer of the Senate as long as he accepts the guidance of the Democratic majority on Senate problems, Blackwell predicted.

"If he doesn't, then we'll take another look," the president pro tem said.

NEWINSURANCE POOL ANNOUNCED BY ST.

voluntary insurance placement pool for fire and extended coverage insurance to assist Missourians who are unable to purchase home and business insurance has been announced by Robert D. Scharz, state superintendent of insurance.

Scharz explained that the state Division of Insurance has devoted a great deal of effort in the past two years toward establishing such a service to help property owners who have had difficulty in purchasing fire insurance, particularly in urban areas.

A state staff team has conducted a door-to-door survey in St. Louis to gather facts on fire insurance problems and used the findings to get up the service. The new insurance program should help to stabilize the insurance industry, which will underwrite those businesses posed to extra loss hazards.

rticipating insurance mpanies, under the new progr, will be enabled to qualify for federal riot reinsurance under the provisions of Title XI of the federal Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968

(MINNEAPOLIS)—IN THE BROKERAGE BUSINESS they're telling the story of an astronaut who was chosen for a special time-space experiment that involved arresting his life processes, shooting him into space, and then returning him to earth alive 100 years later.

Besides being a heck of a good astronaut, he was also a dabbler in the market and put a good portion of his NASA paychecks into stocks.

After floating around the outer space for 100 years, his time-space capsulewas returned to earth, and he hopped out of it not looking a day older than when he had left.

Before his medical checkup and space debriefing, he asked to use the telphone and rang his brokerage office in New York to find out how his stocks were doing.

They checked his portfolio and gave him this report: "Well, let's see. Back in 1968 you had 100 shares of General Motors. That split, split again, and then split...split...hmmm...that's now worth $43,700,00. And 100 shares of Comsat ...oh, that did quite well...1,2,3,4,5,6,7 and 50 shares of $88 million..."

At the end of the report, the voice of the operator cut in: "Your call went three minutes overtime, sir. Will you please deposit $2 million?"

(Will Jones in Minneapolis Tribune)

(MINNEAPOLIS)—HIS MARRIAGE KILLS CHANCES FOR GOOD LIFE

We happened to get a look at a note one of our colleagues submitted to his editor asking for time off.

He wrote, "I need the day off because my best friend is getting married and I'm supposed to be one of the pallbearers."

(DETROIT)—WITH TH Father of a four-year-old recalls reading last Christmas Eve the whole bit on "The Night Before Christmas."

His son's reaction: "When visions of sugar plums run through your head, does it hurt?"

DOG GONE

Everybody has a Social Security number. Why not household pets, which sometimes stray, get lost or stolen, to the great distress of tearful children and distraught owners? Obviously, in our supposedly advanced culture there exists a great breach in the identi fication of all living things by serial number, and into it the Pet Service Corporation of Miami, Oklahoma, has leaped. Said corporation will issue a number which can be tattooed in a pet's ear by a veterinarian. The number is kept in a sort of FBI file for pooches. The company maintains a 24-hour phone service manned by dedicated operators prepared to handle emergencies at any time of night or day. Dogcatchers, police and others concerned with stray animals can get instant information. Thus dog No. 196487 which has been caught raiding a hen house in Sandusky, Ohio, can be traced to its owner in Prescott, Arizona not in a couple of trices. Thus far no animal has entered a complaint about the invasion of his privacy.

Just To Check

A building in the nation's capital houses, among other things, a large computer which processes data in millionths of a second. Soon it is expected to provide weather forecasts at least two weeks in advance, after digesting all manner of information which thousands of mathematicians would have been needed to supply.

We know this is a marvelous electronic age and all that, but knowing also the capricious moods of nature, we wouldn't ignore an aching joint, the antics of tumbleweeds or prognostications of an aged plains Indian, to sort of check on the computer's work.

'PAINT' SET ADDS ZIP

A copycat is right at home when doing an inexpensive co-ordinating job with a liquid embroidery set. Basically, the art work starts with specially formulated paints that are permanent and washable. There are sets available with an embroidery hoop with cushioned back. Once a budding artist learns the principle, it is easy to create individualistic designs. The technique proves popular, for example, in repeating a pattern such as the Franciscan Apple dinnerware shown here. The design is applied by the liquid embroidery method to a hostess apron or to tablemats made of Pellon or another suitable fabric. The special ballpoint tubes of color make it easy for children to help trace, copy or create patterns for pillows, slipcovers, napkins or even bibs for a new brother.

ORDER YOUR THANKSGIVING PIES & CAKES EARLY

"GOD IS MY POINT MAN" — Sfc James Fenling of Brooklyn, N.Y., catches a few winks during operations near Long Son. Sergeant Fenling is a member of the 173d Airborne Brigade.

SUCCESSFUL END of a successful mission finds astronaut Walter Cunningham in a literal wailing for Dom Eisele and Walter Schirra to emerge from their Apollo 7 spacecraft after a flawless 11 days in space pointing the way toward a manned lunar orbit on the upcoming Apollo 8 flight.

"Muito obrigado," says this grateful son of Brazil, where the language recalls Portugal's 16th-century colonization. Two million Brazilians benefit from the Thanksgiving Clothing Campaign.

NEPAL

In a multifaceted "thank you," this Nepalese boy touches palms in a gesture of gratitude, murmurs the Nepali word "dhanyabaad" and adds the international language of a smile.

TOGO

VIETNAM

Two little words in Vietnamese — "cam on" — speak volumes for these war victims. Catholic Relief Services handles 95 per cent of all relief supplies that voluntary agencies distribute in Vietnam.

MEXICO

Three happy Mexican faces and a big "gracias" in triplicate reward Americans who take used clothes to the neighborhood Catholic church during the Bishops' Thanksgiving Clothing Campaign.

During November, we can show our thanks by bringing a bundle of used clothing to the nearest Catholic church.

Each year dolls "do" things. And this season is no exception. Baby Grow-a-tooth (top) does just that. She wiggles her arms, sits up and plays with her crib gymnasium, takes her pacifier. When it has been removed, she has grown a tooth. Loonie Lites (lower left) are fast becoming a fad among youngsters. The 3½-inch vinyl figure can be worn as a necklace or bracelet charm. When its tummy is pressed, its eyes, nose and teeth light up. Little charmer (lower right) is constructed so that her head moves in all directions. She can do backbends and handstands, too.

HIGHLIGHTS AND SIDELIGHTS FROM YOUR STATE CAPITOL

JEFFERSON CITY—Democratic and Republican legislators are organizing for the opening of the 75th General Assembly Jan. 8th and during the past two weeks have met and chosen party leaders.

House Democrats met Nov. 18 and chose their majority party officers.

James E. Godfrey, D-St. Louis, was re-elected as Speaker of the House for his second-two-year term.

Patrick J. Hickey, D-St. Ann, was re-elected by his fellow House Democrats as Speaker pro tem and Richard J. Rabbitt, D-St. Louis, was chosen again as majority floor leader in the lower house.

Charles S. Broomfield, D-Kansas City, was elected assistant majority whip and replaces Don Hancock, D-Doniphan. Heckemeyer, D-St. Louis, is the majority whip and replaces Don Hancock, D-Doniphan. Heckemeyer is the only outstate Missourian named to a party office.

Frank Mazzuca, D-St. Louis, is the new majority caucus chairman, replacing James Troupe Sr., D-St. Louis, and Mrs. Gladys Marric, D-Kansas City, was elected caucus secretary, replacing Mrs. DeVerne Calloway, St. Louis.

House Republicans held their caucus two weeks ago and chose C.J. King, R-Clayton, again as the minority floor leader. C.M. Bassman, R-Hermann, is the new GOP assistant floor leader, replacing Robert E. Young, R-Carthage.

John T. Russell, R-Florissant, was re-elected minority whip. Minority caucus chairmanship duties remain the responsibility of Vernon Betz, R-Trenton. George W. Parker, R-Columbia, was also re-elected caucus secretary.

Senate Democrats have changed their legislative leaders as Sen. A. Basey Vanlandingham, D-Columbia was elected majority floor leader, defeating Sen. William B. Waters, D-Liberty.

Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, succeeds Sen. John Joynt D-St. Louis as Senate president pro tem. Joynt did not seek re-election to the post. Sen. Joseph A. Bauer, D-St. Louis, was re-elected Senate secretary.

Both Vanlandingham and Blackwell are members of a Senate Democratic clique called the "Yonng Turks."

During a recent interview, Vanlandingham attributed the ousting of the "old guard" to the influx of younger blood into the Senate. Capel Alcorn says there should be no radical changes in the Senate leadership; rather the "young Turks" will stress more separation between the legislative and executive departments. Sen. Blackwell said he differs with the concept that the governor should dominate the General Assembly.

Close observers expect the new controlling group of Senate Democrats will oppose many of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes legislative proposals.

Vanlandingham said the main issues confronting the Senate and House will be how to raise money for state needs in the schools, higher education, highway construction and other areas.

The Columbia Democrat said also they he assumed the governor's legislative proposals would include a 50-50 plan for state and local level school financing and some type of toll road proposal.

Toll road legislation stands a good chance of getting through the legislature, Vanlandingham said.

Blackwell predicted that Senate Democrats will use the caucus to a much greater extent than in the past.

Incoming Lt. Gov. W.S. "Bill" Morris of Kansas City will continue to exercise previous powers held by the presiding officer of the Senate as long as he accepts the guidance of the Democratic majority on Senate problems, Blackwell predicted.

"If he doesn't, then we'll find another hook," the president pro tem said.

NEWINSURANCE POOL

ANNOUNCED BY ST. A voluntary insurance placement pool for fire and extended coverage insurance to assist Missourians who are unable to purchase home and business insurance has been announced by Robert D. Scharz, state superintendent of insurance.

Scharz explained that the state Division of Insurance has devoted a great deal of effort in the past two years toward establishing such a service to help property owners who have had difficulty in purchasing fire insurance, particularly in urban areas.

A state staff team has conducted a door-to-door survey in St. Louis to gather facts on fire insurance problems and used the findings to get up the service. The new insurance program should help to stabilize the insurance industry, which will underwrite those businesses proposed to extra loss hazards.

[illegible] insurance companies, under the new program will be enabled to qualify for federal riot reinsurance under the provisions of Title XI of the Federal Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968

Ten years ago — the Soviet Union proposed that West Berlin became a free city, independent of both East and West Germany.

Five years ago — President Lyndon B. Johnson made his first appearance before a joint session of Congress after succeeding President John F. Kennedy.

One year ago — U.S. Secretary of Defense Robert S. McMamara was named the new president of the World Bank.

Today In U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, Nov. 28, the 333rd day of 1968. There are 33 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1943, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Soviet Premier Joseph Stalin and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill met in Theran, Iran, and planned the Allied invasion of Western Europe in World War II.

On this date:

In 1520, the Portuguese navigator, Ferdinand Magellan, reached the Pacific Ocean after passing through the South American strait which now bears his name.

In 1895, the first U.S. auto race was held, on the road between Chicago and Waukegan, Ill. The average speed was 7½ miles an hour.

In 1919, the first woman to be seated in Britain's House of Commons, Lady Astor, was elected.

In 1941, during World War II, British troops captured the Ethiopian city of Gondar, the last outpost in Italy's East African empire.

In 1942, nearly 500 persons perished in a fire at the Cocoanut Grove night club in Boston.

In 1944, it was disclosed that Japanese planes had carried out heavy raids against U.S. bases on Saipan to retaliate for B29 raids against Tokyo.

Ten years ago — the United States fired an intercontinental ballistic missile at full range for the first time, from Cape Canaveral, Fla., to the South Atlantic.

Former Correspondent Reviews 25-Year Change in Tarawa

EDITOR'S NOTE: William H. Hipple, now western director of public relations for American Airlines, was The Associated Press war correspondent on the beach at Tarawa atoll in the Western Pacific Ocean when the Marines landed 25 years ago. He returned to Tarawa this week to commemorate the anniversary.

By WILLIAM H. HIPPLE
Written for The Associated Press

TARAWA, Gilbert Islands (AP) — Exactly 25 years later we came ashore to this lonely atoll astride the Equator in the mid-Pacific where 5,800 men had died for their beliefs in four days of vicious fighting.

This time we were met by happy, dancing Gilbertese natives in grass skirts and flowered print clothing and plied with freshly cut coconuts filled with sweet cool milk. White clad British officials welcomed us with handshakes and bows.

A few of these people were the same. Our party of five, who had been on the original invasion, was led by Gen. David M. Shoup, former commandant of the U.S. Marines and Medal of Honor winner for his heroic leadership on this island.

Gen. Shoup came out of retirement for eight days to represent the United States at formal ceremonies commemorating the 25th anniversary of the assault of Marine and naval forces against this Japanese-hold fortress.

The plaque which Gen. Shoup dedicated at the end of the pier on Betio, the tiny one-half square mile island of this atoll where the assault took place, says, "This was the first American assault against a fortified atoll—the testing ground for Marine amphibious doctrine and techniques that paved the way for the island campaigns that followed and saved thousands of American lives along the road to victory in the Pacific."

Of course, it could not tell the full story of the 1,087 U.S. Marines killed and 2,292 wounded, and 4,690 Japanese dead.

British, Australian, New Zealand and Gilbert and Etlice Island officials participated with Gen. Shoup and U.S. Vice Consul Peter Maher from Fiji in the dedication of the monument. Honor guards from the U.S. destroyer escort Mimorris, the native constabulary of the Gilbert Islands and delegations of local Girl and Boy Scouts, schools and native organizations stood at attention. Crowded on the pier were some 5,000 Gibertese, solemn and colorful in their native dress.

Virtually unnoticed in the crowd was Capt. Unio Suenaga of the Japanese trading ship the "Fiji Maru." By chance the vessel had arrived at Betio the day before—the first Japanese ship to visit here in 25 years. Capt. Suenaga was invited to the ceremony, where he stood, unsmiling and at attention.

The day before held the greatest thrill for those of us who had been there. We flew in over Tarawa from Kwajalein, circlinr the 30-mile long series of islets twice in our C-130 Hercules turboprop flown by Maj. Marvin Mann of Goshen, Ind.

As we came over little Betio, Gen. Shoup, peering from a porthole, exclaimed, "My God, look at those thousands of palm trees. There were only a couple left intact when we left here."

There is a new pier on Betio now, built close to the one on which or nearby so many Marines died. As we approached by sea, there were three amphibious tractors rusting on the reef. On the other side of the pier, we saw several LVT's—landing vehicle tanks—still resting there. Farther out was the hulk of a Japanese freighter which we remembered so well. Japanese troops had fired from it on the first morning inflicting heavy casualties on boats trying to get over the reef and on men wading ashore.

Our launch crept slowly down the right of the pier on the exact route I had taken to shore with the second wave of the 2nd Battalion, 2nd Marine Regiment on the morning of Nov. 20, 1943. Under murderous fire. Our battalion commander, Lt. Col. Herbert R. Amey, had been shot through the head a few feet from me as we waded in after our amtrack was hit.

This time we were met at the beach by the British district commissioner, R.E.N. Smith. He led us back on the pier to display the 20-foot monument which the British have erected on their own volition. The British plaque, to be dedicated with the U.S. plaque the following day, said, "In memory of those who fell November 1943."

Gen. Shoup was anxious to find his old command post, a Japanese bunker laced with concrete, steel and coconut tree logs, near Red Beach Two, right of the pier, where he had established headquarters that first morning as commander of the 2nd Regiment 2nd Marine Division.

The bunker had been leveled but we all agreed that was the spot. We also remembered the then Col. Shoup's message from that spot to Gen. Julian Smith's headquarters on board the battleship Maryland the second afternoon: "Casualties: many. Percentage dead: not known. Combat efficiency: we are winning."

A THANKSGIVING PRAYER!

Lord God, we give Thee thanks this day.
Humbly, in our simple way.
For all the gracious gifts which Thou
Hast deigned so richly to endow -
For life - for every passing minute -
For this, Thy world, and all things in it!

We give Thee thanks, dear Lord, for these
Thy green beneficence of trees.
The kindliness of rain, the birth
Of Springtime from a barren earth -
The earth that bears the bread we break
In gratitude for Thy sweet sake.

We thank Thee, Lord, for healing song.
For courage, wise and tall and strong:
For all the laughter and the tears
That mold the pattern of our years:
For truth and trust and constancy.
For faith that lets us lean on Thee!

We give Thee thanks for ears to hear.
For feet to tread Thy pathways here:
For hands to touch, and lips to sing.
They name in every lovely thing -
For friendship with our fellow men -
But mostly for Thy love.

Amen.

BACALHAU PLENTIFUL

LISBON (AP) — Portuguese have been officially reassured that there will be plenty of bacalhau (dried cod fish) on the market for the rest of the year.

There had been reports of a possible shortage of the national dish, which would be roughly equivalent to a shortage of spaghetti in Italy. A period of high prices started the alarm.

Now official agencies have said that there will be enough bacalhau for the next nine months, and pointed out that production of the boardlike, salted fish actually increased 23 per cent during the first seven months of this year. Prices are now down to normal.

Sikestonians Are Friendly People

BY MARGARET DU BOIS

Philip and Nella Nash and their three children have lived in Sikeston three years. They have found the Sikestonians to be friendly in a southern way but they prefer the northerners' outspoken like or dislike.

Before coming here they lived in Jackson Hole, Wyo. three years. She is originally from Montpelier, Idaho, and he is from Preston, 40 miles separates the two small communities.

Nash worked at KMPL radio station in advertising and news before joining the Daily Standard as advertising manager.

Mrs. Nash is a busy homemaker with the children and civic activities to keep her on the go. The oldest child, Michael, is nine, and attends fourth grade at Southwest elementary school. Sarah Leigh, six, is in the first grade, and Sabina is three. She finds that as assisant den mother for her son's Cub Scouts is demanding and time consuming but feels this is her responsibility.

Mrs. Nash also belongs to the Delta Gamma Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority and the Junior Woman's Club.

She believes that social activities are necessary for the gathering of new and better ideas for the family, and a service to the community is performed when clubs work toward a definite and useful goal.

The Nashs belong to the Young Democrats, which they enjoy and consider to be important. Nash belongs to Recovery, Inc., a project to improve housing.

Nash likes to wood burn, a process involving peeling wood, sketching a scene on this with a pencil, using different edges of soldering iron for shading effects, and burnign to the desired color. He has made a coffee table, using this method, out of white pine and cherry tree root.

VOICES OBJECTION

MADRAS, India (AP) — A letter-writer to a south Indian newspaper noted with dismay that the newly issued ten-rupee notes have the signature of the governor of the Reserve Bank in Hindi, the language of north India.

"I wonder if the appointment of the governorship of the Reserve Bank will henceforth be restricted to the Hindi-speaking people or to those who can at least sign in Hindi," he wrote.

Anti-Hindi sentiment is strong sometimes violent in south India.

THE WILD ROSE

God watches o'er the wild rose.
More closely than the tame
For someone's ever there to care
And give to them a name.

The wild rose grows most anywhere.
No name does it acquire
But lovely for the masters touch
Makes it a special flower.

He waters it with gentle rain
Gives sunlight from above

HIGH BIRTH RATE

LISBON (AP) — The annual number of births in Catholic Portugal has been steadily declining in this decade, but the birth rate remains one of the highest in Europe.

In 1961, there were 217,916 live births in continental Portugal. In 1965, the figure was 210,290. During last year live births dropped to 202,061. That was roughly the figure 20 years ago, when Portugal had 1.2 million fewer inhabitants than the nearly 10 million it has today.

But the birth rate, at 21.4 per thousand, trails in Europe only those of Albania 34 per thousand and Ireland 21.6 per thousand.

Specialists attribute the drop in births to continuing heavy emigration abroad and the rising cost of living.

Dividends Paid To Policyholders

A total of $258,775,000 in dividends to New York Life Insurance Company policyowners has been authorized for payment in 1969, according to New York Life Agent Shad Old.

This is an increase of approximately $10.4 million over dividends payable in 1968.

About $5.7 million will be paid to policyowners in Missouri as dividends on individual life insurance and annuity policies. As a result of the increased dividends, Old said, millions of New York Life policyowners will be receiving their insurance at the lowest cost in the company's 124 year history.

This is an increase of approximately $10.4 million over dividends payable in 1968.

About $5.7 million will be paid to policyowners in Missouri as dividends on individual life insurance and annuity policies. As a result of the increased dividends, Old said, millions of New York Life policyowners will be receiving their insurance at the lowest cost in the company's 124 year history.

READY FOR RECREATION

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — When Dwain Miller resigned as Boulder's director of parks and recreation, he was given a fitting farewell gift by associates an aluminum canoe. Miller intends to get a doctor's degree, then teach park and recreation administration in a university.

A THANKSGIVING PRAYER!

Lord God, we give Thee thanks this day.
Humbly, in our simple way.
For all the gracious gifts which Thou
Hast deigned so richly to endow -
For life - for every passing minute -
For this, Thy world, and all things in it!

We give Thee thanks, dear Lord, for these
Thy green beneficence of trees.
The kindliness of rain, the birth
Of Springtime from a barren earth -
The earth that bears the bread we break
In gratitude for Thy sweet sake.

We thank Thee, Lord, for healing song.
For courage, wise and tall and strong:
For all the laughter and the tears
That mold the pattern of our years:
For truth and trust and constancy.
For faith that lets us lean on Thee!

We give Thee thanks for ears to hear.
For feet to tread Thy pathways here:
For hands to touch, and lips to sing.
They name in every lovely thing -
For friendship with our fellow men -
But mostly for Thy love.

Amen.

People of Two States Watch As Yule Lights Switch On

KANSAS CITY - Forty years ago a great mid western tradition began developing in Kansas City. Today thousands of people come from throughout Kansas and Missouri to see the Country Club Plaza turned into a sea of glitter and brilliant color for the Christmas season.

Thanksgiving night at 7:30 p.m. a 250-member choral group will set the stage for the actual "turning on" ceremony. At that time a 30 mile string with more than 95,000 bulbs, 200 giant red metal candles, 80 red and silver fiberglass balls and numerous electric star clusters will burst forth against the Kansas City skyline to produce America's most spectacular outdoor lighting exhibit.

Each Plaza building -- specialty shops, department stores, grocery stores, luxury apartments, restaurants, threatres and offices -- is outlined in various colored bulbs and accented with distinctive patterns. The lights will continue blazing each evening throughout the holiday season.

Actually the Plaza Christmas Lighting event had its beginning with Howard McCutcheon, a Kansas Citian who first put a lighted Christmas tree on his lawn.

At that time J.C. Nichols, developer of the Plaza district and surrounding residential areas, was impressed with the possibility of community holiday decorations. So in 1924 a Nichols executive, Charles S. Pitrat, personally installed Christmas lights over the doorway of the Plaza's first structure...Suydam Building.

A story in The Kansas City Star in 1924 gave credit to late J.C. Nichols for stimulating the idea of lighted Christmas trees on the lawns of Kansas City homes. So what started as a community celebration soon became the custom of a great many residents on their own home.

When the Plaza Theatre building was completed in 1928 a string of lights extended across 47th street was considered quite a feat.

And since the Country Club Plaza was the first shopping center in the United States it's safe to assume there were the first group of commerical buildings to be lavishly decorated for the Christmas holidays.

But the development of the lighting display is not all glamour. It represents the efforts of many craftsmen, carpenters and electricians who begin installing the lights in September. The hand-made cords which have a light affixed every 18 inches are, of course, retainefrom year to year. And almost every year new areas are lighted.

Each lighting season more than 5,000 bulbs burn out or are broken in some manner. A crew is kept busy replacing the bulbs as they become defective. Over the years when trees or evergreen rope has been used the pine needled choke up drains and must be cleaned.

During the summer, the thousands of feet of wire and sockets are wound in coils, worn places repaired and stored until next fall.

The assemblege of people to the Plaza district represents a great tribute to the religious season. The carols and hymns that resound in the area send chills of happiness through those persons who journey to Kansas City to see this great happening. Certainly the invention of the electric light in 1882 has reached the epitomy of its beauty here.

Mindful of Man

"Mindful of Man" is a story of a man involved in mankind, a Methodist minister who has served not only his church but who has reached beyond to become a part of the lives of many others not of his denomination.

This is a story that tells how William Stewart, a young Kentuckian, became angry when a pretty young widow charmed village school board members into giving her the teacher's job he thought was his. Along with three companions, he set out in a mule-drawn covered wagon in the summer of 1900 for Indian Territory in Oklahoma.

The adventure ended in disillusionment, but William Stewart did not return home. From then on, his life was radically changed. The brash young wanderer met dark-eyed Mabel Porter in her uncle's otel in Oxly, Missouri, and decided to stay. Then William felt the stirring of something deeper and more profound than anything he had known and, in the little country church of Antioch, re realized that he wanted to serve God and man.

Mabel and William Stewart reared eleven children to adulthood (four died in infancy) and yet found time for other people. Along with the usual frustrations and joys of bringing up a large family there was the time in the Depression era when the Rev. Mr. Stewart headed a relief project that put food into the mouths of the hungry unemployed and their families. There was theprint shop that started out as a made-work project for young Paul, afflicted with deafness, and which resulted in the establishment of a newspaper and the employment of sons and daughters. There were the way years, when six of the seven sons were serving overseas in the armed forces. Along with all these and other things were the problems and challenges of the pastorates he held in Southeast Missouri from the Bootheel to St. Louis.

Anecdotes from these many fruitful years fill this account of a man who truly believes in the brotherhood of man. Now retired from the active ministry, the Rev. Mr. Stewart still finds time to counsel the troubled and help them with their problems.

"Mindful of Man" is a glimpse of Americana that is both simple and profound but, most important, real. This grandson of a Kentucky frontiersman recounts, sometimes humorously and sometimes soberly the story of more than eighty years.

"I'll try, Sir."

That was the answer that 32-year-old John Miller gave Gen. William Henry Harrison in the War of 1812 when Harrison asked the young Ohio colonel if he could break the deadly British siege of Fort Meig.:

The stubborn young colonel tried and succeeded and then went on ot become the fourth governor of Missouri. He held the office of governor longer than any other man in Missouri until the late Gov. Phil M. Donnelly served two non-consecutive terms.

Miller was born 187 years ago today in what is now West Virginia. While a young man Miller moved to Steubenville, O., and became publisher and editor of the Western Herald and Gazette.

In Ohio he obtained a commission in the state militia and thus commanded a force in the War of 1812. The British siege of Fort Meigs lasted five days, May 1 to 5, 1813.

Miller and his 350 men, in what some historians call a "brilliant military sortie," struck a force of 500 British soldiers and Indians, captured a battery of guns and broke the back of the siege.

AFTER the war, Miller went to St. Louis and in 1817 he became reigster of the land office at Franklin. The circumstances that placed him in the governor's office were unusual. Frederick Bates, the brother of Edward Bates who later played such an important part in pushing Abraham Lincoln's election in 1860, was elected governor in 184. He died the next year. In the meantine, Lt. Gov. Benjamin H. Reeves had resigned. Under the new law an election was necessary if the vacancy occured 18 months before the end of the incumbent's term.

Abraham J. Williams who, as president pro tem of the senate, became acting governor, called the special election and it was held December 8, 1825. Miller threw his hat in the ring, going against three older and highly-respected men, William Carr Lane, first mayor of St. Louis, Col. Rufus Easton second attorney general of Missouri, and Judge David Todd, a lawyer and judge. Miller put on a whirlwind campaign and was elected.

In his first biennial message Miller said it was evident that more protection was needed on the Santa Fed Trail and recommended the establishment of a military post at a cross sing of the Arkansas river to keep the lawless tribes in check.

"When we consider the vast expenditures which the governemnt cheerfully encounters for the protection of the maritime commerce," he said, "it would seem that the expenses of such a post, with an escort of 50 to 60 men, might readily be encountered for the protection of inland trade with Mexico."

In another speech he said, "That trade is much importance ot this state; the principal part of the silver coin circulation, particularly in the western part of the state, is derived from that quarter, and there is an outlet there for vast quantities of cotton goods."

GOVERNOR MILLER had the co-operation and backing of the people in almost all of his recommendations. Many legislators did not want to locate the new capital in Jefferson City.

Miller foresaw the geographical advantage, for later years,and insisted on it, and won. He also recommended that a state priosn be located in Jefferson City, and won this point.

Miller was not a colorful governor, but he was not easily influenced by the political leaders and did what he thought was right. The fact that he had no opposition for a second term may indicate the confidence Missourians had in him.

After the expiration of his second term in 1832 he retired to Fayette for four years and then was elected to Congress and re-elected twice. He declined a fourth term and moved to Florissant. He died in 1846 and is buried in Bellefontaine cemetery in St. Louis.

LEGISLATION THAT CONFUSES

The current public clamor about gun control legislation is confusing many people. Supporters and opponents of stricter control give reasons which range from the reasonale to the completely ridiculous.

And logical discussion of stricter gun-control legislation must answer two questions:

1. What will proposed legislation do? And
2. What will proposed legislation not do?

Answering the last question first, proposed gun legislation will not take away from citizens their constitutional right to bear arms. This should be made very clear. It will not deny sportsmen or gun-collectors or bird-hunters or target-practice shooters their long-held right to possess a firearm, nor will it destory the right of a man to buy a gun and keep it in his home, for his and his family's protection.

What proposed gun legislation will do is to ban inter-state mail-order sales of rifles and shot-guns, in addition to the similar ban on pistol sales which is contained in the anticrime bill recently signed into law by President Johnson.

Perhaps the most restrictive legislation is that suggested by Senator Joseph D. Tydings of Maryland, which would require registration of all guns and licensing of gun owners. Proponents argue, and we argue, that such legislation will help to keep deadly firearms out of the hands of the hardened criminal, the metnally unbalanced, the emotionally disturbed, the dope addict and the alcoholic.

When such legislation is passed, and we think it is in the interest of the public that it be passed, its ultimate effectiveness will rest with the judiciary.

If our courts and our judges make it too expensive and too risky for citizens to possess gunes illegally, imposing justice swiftly, firmly and impartially, gun control legislation can do nothing but serve all citizens - the gun-toter as well as the gun-victim.

Cleveland (N.C.) Times

VIGILATE JURIES

This remark, overheard in a neighborhood store, points up an all too widespread impatience with the formal legal processes for determining the guilt or innocence of suspects in highly publicized crimes. The specific object of the above remark was Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, accused assailant of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

There have been similar but more damaging public statements made assuming Sirhan's guilt. These can, on the one hand, interfere with giving the accused a fair trail. On the other, they can undermine confidence in our court system which is vitally needed at this moment of national change and unrest.

The first such statement, by Los Angeles' Mayor Yorty, was carried by major TV networks only hours after the tragic event. The mayor crudely spoke out about the suspect without regard for the likelihood he might prejudice future jurors. The presence of mind of newscasters, NBC's Edwin Newman for one, in countering the mayor's remarks was commendable.

Another unfortunate statement, also reaching millions of TV viewers, was aired on Johnny Carson's "Tonight" show. Novelist Truman Capote, no authroity on crime despite the wide sales of his book "In Cold Blood," led his hosts through a labyrinth of speculation about the assassinations of President Kennedy, the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and Senator Kennedy. He said the acts may have been intended to disrupt the nation - the so-called "Manchurian Candidate" theory, not original with him. He said flatly that Sirhan was the slayer of Senator Kennedy, but that James Earl Ray was not the assassin of Dr. King.

The entire discussion was utterly in bad taste. The New York Times TV critic was just in his charge: "If the country disapproves of individuals physically taking the law into their own hands, then it can no less frown on individuals intellectually doing the same."

Call It What You May!

The development of our society has created all-powerful segments which must be counter-balanced if this democracy is to function in the manner to which we have become accustomed.

On one hand, we have big business vs. big labor and the other, big government vs. big business and/or big labor. Often it would appear that the individual is an obscure taxpayer who has little to say about anything. We feel that it is time that the people be given an avenue to defend themselves in all areas pertaining to goverment largely because it has grown away from the people whom it serves.

Most leaders who have been working with the ghetto areas of this nation have agreed that people residing therein feel frustrated because they have no means of righting wrongs nor contacting people in authority. Through lack of communication and education, these persons have been unable to find satisfaction through hiring an attorney to represent them in court or to define their rights before the law. This is certainly understandable for even persons far removed from these conditions have experienced the same feelings of frustration.

Certainly, it would give the common people a better reaction to some of the unrelated actions of government these days have them seek redress or at least an explanation of the action. Such a system could work exceedingly well in the ghettos of this nation where frustrations upon frustrations build up until they spill over into riots and violent actions of other natures.

Yes, Judicare is a step in this direction but it still does not completely fill the order for this type of service which is needed today. It is time that this state starts talking and thinking about the ombudsman for its people. This is the level on which this problem should be approached, rather than waiting for the federal goverment and its cumbersome and usually expensive and expansive programs.

After the expiration of his second term in 1832 he retired to Fayette for four years and then was elected to Congress and re-elected twice. He declined a fourth term and moved to Florissant. He died in 1846 and is buried in Bellefontaine cemetery in St. Louis.

LEGISLATION THAT CONFUSES

The current public clamor about gun control legislation is confusing many people. Supporters and opponents of stricter control give reasons which range from the reasonale to the completely ridiculous.

And logical discussion of stricter gun-control legislation must answer two questions:

1. What will proposed legislation do? And
2. What will proposed legislation not do?

Answering the last question first, proposed gun legislation will not take away from citizens their constitutional right to bear arms. This should be made very clear. It will not deny sportsmen or gun-collectors or bird-hunters or target-practice shooters their long-held right to possess a firearm, nor will it destory the right of a man to buy a gun and keep it in his home, for his and his family's protection.

What proposed gun legislation will do is to ban inter-state mail-order sales of rifles and shot-guns, in addition to the similar ban on pistol sales which is contained in the anticrime bill recently signed into law by President Johnson.

Perhaps the most restrictive legislation is that suggested by Senator Joseph D. Tydings of Maryland, which would require registration of all guns and licensing of gun owners. Proponents argue, and we argue, that such legislation will help to keep deadly firearms out of the hands of the hardened criminal, the metnally unbalanced, the emotionally disturbed, the dope addict and the alcoholic.

When such legislation is passed, and we think it is in the interest of the public that it be passed, its ultimate effectiveness will rest with the judiciary.

If our courts and our judges make it too expensive and too risky for citizens to possess gunes illegally, imposing justice swiftly, firmly and impartially, gun control legislation can do nothing but serve all citizens - the gun-toter as well as the gun-victim.

Cleveland (N.C.) Times

VIGILATE JURIES

This remark, overheard in a neighborhood store, points up an all too widespread impatience with the formal legal processes for determining the guilt or innocence of suspects in highly publicized crimes. The specific object of the above remark was Sirhan Bishara Sirhan, accused assailant of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

There have been similar but more damaging public statements made assuming Sirhan's guilt. These can, on the one hand, interfere with giving the accused a fair trail. On the other, they can undermine confidence in our court system which is vitally needed at this moment of national change and unrest.

The first such statement, by Los Angeles' Mayor Yorty, was carried by major TV networks only hours after the tragic event. The mayor crudely spoke out about the suspect without regard for the likelihood he might prejudice future jurors. The presence of mind of newscasters, NBC's Edwin Newman for one, in countering the mayor's remarks was commendable.

Another unfortunate statement, also reaching millions of TV viewers, was aired on Johnny Carson's "Tonight" show. Novelist Truman Capote, no authroity on crime despite the wide sales of his book "In Cold Blood," led his hosts through a labyrinth of speculation about the assassinations of President Kennedy, the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and Senator Kennedy. He said the acts may have been intended to disrupt the nation - the so-called "Manchurian Candidate" theory, not original with him. He said flatly that Sirhan was the slayer of Senator Kennedy, but that James Earl Ray was not the assassin of Dr. King.

The entire discussion was utterly in bad taste. The New York Times TV critic was just in his charge: "If the country disapproves of individuals physically taking the law into their own hands, then it can no less frown on individuals intellectually doing the same."

Call It What You May!

The development of our society has created all-powerful segments which must be counter-balanced if this democracy is to function in the manner to which we have become accustomed.

On one hand, we have big business vs. big labor and the other, big government vs. big business and/or big labor. Often it would appear that the individual is an obscure taxpayer who has little to say about anything. We feel that it is time that the people be given an avenue to defend themselves in all areas pertaining to goverment largely because it has grown away from the people whom it serves.

Most leaders who have been working with the ghetto areas of this nation have agreed that people residing therein feel frustrated because they have no means of righting wrongs nor contacting people in authority. Through lack of communication and education, these persons have been unable to find satisfaction through hiring an attorney to represent them in court or to define their rights before the law. This is certainly understandable for even persons far removed from these conditions have experienced the same feelings of frustration.

Certainly, it would give the common people a better reaction to some of the unrelated actions of government these days have them seek redress or at least an explanation of the action. Such a system could work exceedingly well in the ghettos of this nation where frustrations upon frustrations build up until they spill over into riots and violent actions of other natures.

Yes, Judicare is a step in this direction but it still does not completely fill the order for this type of service which is needed today. It is time that this state starts talking and thinking about the ombudsman for its people. This is the level on which this problem should be approached, rather than waiting for the federal goverment and its cumbersome and usually expensive and expansive programs.

The Irony of Traffic Tragedy At A Time of Holiday Joy

PERHAPS it is because, at the season of joy, the human mind turns away from unpleasantness. The fear of mishap, of injury or even death is an unwelcome intruder at the festive assembly of family and friends in the Thanksgiving Christmas-New Year's period just ahead. So there occurs an unconscious, almost imperceptible relaxing of the average motorist's usual alertness to danger. At this happy time, he does not want to be disturbed by worry over the perils of traffic.

And thus it is, terrible inevitability, that tragedy haunts the nation's streets and highways more potently at this otherwise gladsome year-end period than at any other. Now the traffic patrolmen, ambulance drivers and hospital emergency room workers look ahead with reluctant foreboding to what they know will be their busy time.

There are, in truth, a whole host of natural hazards and other factors peculiar to this time of year that contribute to heightened, traffic is a seasonal attitude of mind that fails to show proper wariness against these elements, a sort of mass motoring psychosis of don't-bother-me.

Darkness is the enemy of driver and pedestrian alike, and it falls ever earlier in these weeks after the return to standard time on the clocks, building toward the year's shortest day in late December. Nor are dusk and nightfall the only obstacles to a clear view of the situationahead. Winter is moving in, with its whole messy assortment of snow, sleet, freezing rain and spatted road-film on vehicle windshields.

THOSE same vagaries of wintry weather can turn the roadway into a treacherous, slippery chute. But the scattered slick spots in a time of thawing are more likely to cause the crashes that kill.

The very business of the season itself is a deterrent to thoughts of caution. There are places to go, people to see, things to do and shopping lists to be filled. The preoccupied pedestrian shopper, arms full of packages, late and hurrying, is the worst kind of risk in te crowded streets.

Finally, then, there is the very overt hazard of holiday drinking. The office or house party, for all the seasonal fellowship they generate, can too often have a sorrowful aftermath. On these occasions the average drinker may over-do it and the person who seldom touches the stuff goes overboard on an annual fling. Either can become a mobile disaster at the wheel of a car afterward.

The sum of all these specifi handicaps plus what might be termed the holiday motoring mentality add up to a fearsome statistical record. The December, 1965, Kansas City death toll of 15 was the worst single month in 30 years, and the two subsequent Decembers have each brought 10 traffic fatalities.

This year of 1968, after a commendable hold-th-line performance last year on U.S. roads, is once more one of grim upward thrust in the roll of victims, now certain to exceed the annual total of around 53,000 these last two years. This great nameless, statistical figure, impossible to grasp in terms of cumulative human personal loss, is noentheless composed of a vast legion of individuals with names.

NOR does the simple count of the dead measure the total cost. After the the grinding impact of crashing vehicles come the months of pain, hostpial bills, lost work and pleasures, wrecked family finances and the drain of often-useless litigation. Such an awesome penalty for a moment's carelessness or forgetfulness-or even the innocent misfortune to be matched with the errant car that runs the stoplight or crosses the median strip.

The magnitude of this continuing American tragedy has by no means gone unmourned or ignored. In just the last two years, an unprecedented federal involvment in traffic safety legisattion has sparked new life-saving efforts on a dozen or more fronts. Drivers are trained in high school and retrained later, in adult improvement or traffic court schools. Licensing laws and crackdowns on drinking drivers get progressively if slowly tougher. The list of federal standards for safety features in new model motor cars grows longer and more detailed, and more states require periodic safety inspection of all vehicles. Modern highway engineering aims of the virtual elimination of 2-way traffic and crossroads.

But the last best hope lies in better performance behind the steering wheel, in the imponderable of human attitudes. And here, too often in this holiday season just ahead, the lag in normal driver alertness and safety habits thrusts grief into a time of joy. What more terrible anomaly than the Christmas tree shining brightly in the home suddenly stilled by death in the streets?

Missouri Heritage

Lew Larkin in the Kansas City Times

THE history of Missouri in the last century and that of Missourians who explored, scouted, conquered and settled the western half of the nation is replete with achievements by families, and outstanding in this respects is the Bent family.

The grandfather gave some idea of the family gall and courage in that he was one of the leaders of the Boston Tea party. His son, Silas Bent, was born and educated in Massachusetts and came to St. Louis in 1806. He was appointed a judge of the common pleas court and in 1809 signed the first charter for the town of St. Louis. In 1813 he was appointed judge of the territorial supreme court and served in this post until 1820 when he was elected to the Missouri Senate. When it met to organize he was unamimously elected president pro tem.

Charles Bent, son of Silas Bent, who was born 168 years ago today in Charleston, Va., was thyoldest of several brothers who went to St. Louis with his parents in 1806. John Bent became a well-known St. Louis lawyer. Silas Bent, jr., charted ocean currents, encouraged early Arctic exploration and accompanied Commodore Perry when the fleet entered Japanese ports.

CHARLES BENT resigned at West Point to follow the sun, and in 1823 he began trapping operations in the Sioux country. The next year William Bent joined him and they began trapping on the upper Arkansas river.

William Bent was Colorado's first permanent white settler and for many years its most prominent citizen. He had left his Missouri home at the age of 15 to follow his older brother, Charles, into the beckoning West.

About 1828 the triumvirate was formed -- Charles and William Bent and Ceran St. Vrain, who was a prominent trapper, farmer, livestock owner and pioneer in the region of the Rockies and the Southwest. In Southeastern Arkansas they built the first adobe fort and largest trading post in the mountain region, It was called Bent's fort.

William Bent usually managed the fort while Charles Bent and St. Vrain trapped, contacted the tribes and induced them to take their pelts to the fort. In a short time more than 100 persons were employed by the Bent-St. Vrain company, which was surpassed in the volume of business only by John Jacob Astor's big American Fur company.

Charles Bent became the company's chief agent in the Santa Fe and Taos trade and after 1832 he made Taos his permanent home. He also led trading caravans from American settlements, namely Franklin, Independence, and Westport to Santa Fe in 1829, 1832 and 1833. The 1832 caravan brought back to Missouri $98,000 in Mexican silver, 1,300 head of mules, 13,000 pounds of beaver fur and 355 buffalo hides.

Charles Bent became the first civil governor of what is now New Mexico. In the war with Mexico, General Kearney and Col. Alexander Doniphan invaded the vast Southwest and Kearney named Bent governor in 1846. He soon became a highly respected leader in the area, a soldier, ex-officio super-intendent of Indian affairs and adviser to American and Mexican officials as well as the tribes. Bent married Maria Ignacio Jaramillo, a sister-in-law of Kit Carson.

IN THE first of the war Kearney left for California and Doniphan marched to smoke the peace pipe with the Navajos. At first there was comparative peace in the area of New Mexico. Then came rumors of trouble. Gen. Sterling Price and his men took remedial action and quiet was restored. Then came new rumors. Bent was warned to leave Taos, but he believed that long-standing friendships with both Mexicans and Indians would insure his safety. On the night of January 18, 1847, a band of both Mexicans and Indians entered his home, shot him and scalped him while he was semi-conscious. Then he was decapitated.

Troops under Sterling Price and a posse under St. Vrain sought and caught most of the killers St. Vrain retired from the firm the next year and William Bent managed it alone for several years. He offered the fort to the government. The price offered was so low that Bent blew up the fort, loaded his family in wagons and went to a spot near the present-day Powers, Colo., where he built a smaller fort and leased it to the government in 1859. It was called Fort Lyon. He died 10 years later.

ARMY NEESA
MALE NURSES

When the Army sends out a call for volunteer nurses it means male as well as female, it was reported this week by Sgt. Mooney of the U. S. Army Recruiting Station at Cape Girardeau.

Sgt. Mooney said that at the present time the Army has hundreds of male commissioned nurses on active duty. They are serving in all major commands throughout Europe and southern Asia, as well as the states.

He said that male nurses receive the same benefits as all officers in the Army and are used in all areas of specialties such as operating room, nurse anesthesia, health nursing and many other technical and professional areas in nursing.

In addition, Sgt. Mooney said that male nurses may volunteer for the paratroopers and do a job that a female cannot do. The paratrooper nurse goes through almost the same training as a regular trooper. They jump with the paratroopers and give medical assistance when needed.

For further information on opportunities for male nurses in the Army, call Sgt. Mooney at 335-9052.

Santa ARRIVES!

DOWNTOWN SIKESTON FRIDAY, NOV. 29--7 P.M.

Washington University Scientist Calls for Earthquake Warning System

ST. LOUIS-A region which includes Southeast Missouri, Southern Illinois, Southwest Indiana, Western Kentucky, Northwest Tennessee and Northeast Arkansas is criss-crossed with one of the most complex systems of faults in the earth's surface and sub-surface on the North America continent.

The most well-known is the so-called New Madrid fault, which is thought to be part of a large zone of faults extending along a northeasterly axis to the St. Lawrence Seaway. It was the epicenter for the 1811 earthquake, one of the largest tremors ever recorded on the continent.

The Nov. 9 earthquake did not emanate from the New Madrid fault. The epicenter for this earthquake has been fixed in South Central Illinois along an east-west axis of surface and sub-surface anomalies that are found across Illinois, Missouri and Kansas. These are dome-like structures, extending from Hicks Dome in Southeast Illinois to Rose Dome in South Central Kansas. (Many earth scientists believe that these domes may have been produced by volcanic acticity deep in the earth, but there is no substantial evidence to establish the origin of the domes.)

It wasn't a surprise to earth scientists that an earthquake occurred Nov. 9 in the region outlined above, but activity along the Illinois-Missouri-Kansas axis added a new dimension to studies of this complex area. No significant tremors had been recorded along this axis until Nov.

In an article, in the Washington University Magazine article, Dr. Emil Mateker, associate professor of earth sciences at the university, explains why this region should be studied with relatively new geophysical techniques.

He concludes in his article: "It is imperative that research continue toward the ultimate objective of developing a reliable earthquake warning system."

His article follows:

EARTHQUAKES ARE ONE of the natural hazards with which man must live. They are world-wide in distribution, vary enormously in intensity, and can cause tremendous damage and loss of life. To the public, they are mysterious events that occur without warning. It has been possbiel to develop warning systems for typhoons and hurricanes, and with somewhat less success, for tornadoes, but earthquakes seem to strike completely with no forewarning.

The science of seismology, concerned with all aspects of earthquakes, has as a natural goal the development of methods of predicting their occurrence and warning against them. Today, earthquake prediction is only a goal, but the state of the art has taken such a great leap forward during the past decade that it is possible to envision its becoming a reality. The Japanese have been engaged in prediction studies for several years with minor successes, and recently a ten-year study plan has been proposed to Congress to develop earthquake prediction criteria for the California region, one of the most active earthquake areas in the world.

Although earthquakes are world-wide, they do not occur everywhere in the world. They are normally associated with the so-called "earthquake belts." One such belt rings the Pacific and includes the California and Alaska regions. The wide distribution and the difference in the gelology of the regions involved suggest an immediate problem for the development of prediction techniques. Each area has its own earthquake characteristics and it is doubtful that criteria developed for one area would be applicable to another.

Most people think of Japan or California when earthquakes are mentioned; it is rare indeed when the term conjures up Missouri. Yet, one of the most famous and devastating earthquake sequences ever known on the North American Continent was the New Madrid Earthquake, named for a town in southeastern Missouri. The New Madrid Earthquake exceeded in severity the great disasters in San Francisco in 1906 and in Alaska in 1964 and continued for a period of more than a year. In fact, mild earthquake activity continues in the area today and is the subject of a reserach program that has been underway in Washington University's Department of Earth Sciences since 1965.

New Madrid is located on the north bank of the Mississippi, about 150 miles south of St. Louis, on the flood plains of southeast Missouri. The river changes its direction often in this area and the town is located on an eastwest bend that severs a section of Kentucky from the "mainland," making it necessary to enter it from Tennesee. Washington University Scientist Calls for Earthquake Warning System

ST. LOUIS-A region which includes Southeast Missouri, Southern Illinois, Southwest Indiana, Western Kentucky, Northwest Tennessee and Northeast Arkansas is criss-crossed with one of the most complex systems of faults in the earth's surface and sub-surface on the North American continent.

The most well-known is the so-called New Madrid fault, which is thought to be part of a large zone of faults extending along a northeasterly axis to the St. Lawrence Seaway. It was the epicenter for the 1811 earthquake, one of the largest tremors ever recorded on the continent.

The Nov. 9 earthquake did not emanate from the New Madrid fault. The epicenter for this earthquake has been fixed in South Central Illinois along an east-west axis of surface and sub-surface anomalies that are found across Illinois, Missouri and Kansas. These are dome-like structures, extending from Hicks Dome in Southeast Illinois to Rose Dome in South Central Kansas. (Many earth scientists believe that these domes may have been produced by volcanic acticity deep in the earth, but there is no substantial evidence to establish the origin of the domes.)

It wasn't a surprise to earth scientists that an earthquake occurred Nov. 9 in the region outlined above, but activity along the Illinois-Missouri-Kansas axis added a new dimension to studies of this complex area. No significant tremors had been recorded along this axis until Nov.

In an article, in the Washington University Magazine article, Dr. Emil Mateker, associate professor of earth sciences at the university, explains why this region should be studied with relatively new geophysical techniques.

He concludes in his article: "It is imperative that research continue toward the ultimate objective of developing a reliable earthquake warning system."

His article follows:

EARTHQUAKES ARE ONE of the natural hazards with which man must live. They are world-wide in distribution, vary enormously in intensity, and can cause tremendous damage and loss of life. To the public, they are mysterious events that occur without warning. It has been possbiel to develop warning systems for typhoons and hurricanes, and with somewhat less success, for tornadoes, but earthquakes seem to strike completely with no forewarning.

The science of seismology, concerned with all aspects of earthquakes, has as a natural goal the development of methods of predicting their occurrence and warning against them. Today, earthquake prediction is only a goal, but the state of the art has taken such a great leap forward during the past decade that it is possible to envision its becoming a reality. Day of the Earthquake

That Was in 1811, When the Mississippi River Ran Backwards

Jeanne Hawkins in FOCUS—Midwest (Nov. 1964)

It hit New Madrid, on Dec. 16, 1811, at 2 in the morning. Settlers ran terrostricken from tottering and falling buildings to find the earth belching forth great volumes of sand and water. Stores and houses fell into great fissures.

The river rose five or six feet in a few minutes. Its color changed to a reddish hue and became thick with mud roiled from its bottom. The surface of the Mississippi was covered with foam and the jets on the shore went higher than the treetops. Within five minutes, the clear serene night become overcast and purplish

The air was filled with a dense, sulphurous vapor that left the inhabitants gasping for breath. The over-cast stayed until daybreak; aftershocks (twenty-seven of them) occurring every six to ten minutes accompanied by sudden flashes of fire brought a night full of horrow. The fissures ran from southeast to northwest. People felled trees across the direction of cleavage and salt or lay on the trunks to keep from being buried alive.

Between New Madrid and Vick's Plantation, now Vicksburg, there wasn't a sign of a town remaining along the three hundred mile stretch of river. Chimmneys were thrown down in Cincinnati. The three major shocks on Dec. 16, 1811, Jan. 23, 1812, and Feb. 7, 1812 were felt over an area of 1,000,000 square miles. It was felt at the headwaters of the Missouri and Arkansas rivers and on the Gulf of Mexico and in Canada. Jared Brooks at Louisville recorded 1874 shocks between Dec. 16th and March 15th. Aftershocks were felt for over a year and it was almost two years before complete cessation.

There had been no warning. Fortunately, there was little loss of life because of the thinly populated area. Between the Mississippi and the Great Plains, Indians reported forests were overthrown and rocks split in two.

Between Cairo and the mouths of the White and Arkansas rivers, the ground nose and fell in great waves, making new lakes, leaving swamps and river beds dry. One of the largest of these earthquake formed lakes is Reelfoot lake in Tennessee, which is sixty to seventy miles long and three to twenty miles wide. Here forest trees had fish swimming through their brances and tortoises crawling through cane brakes. The water is clear as a mountain stream in contrast to the yellow Mississippi.

Another severe shock in the morning brought more landslides. The quake caused the Mississippi to run backward for several hours when it raised the river bed at one point. One flatboatman told of seeing the whole river flowing into a fissure, pulling his boat irrevocably toward the falls. He escaped miraculously when the fissure filled or closed and the water met in gigantic waves.

The steamboat New Orleans floated on the broad, smooth waters of the Ohio with a relaxed crew. The Nicholas Roosevelt boat was the first of its kind in the West and had just come through the falls of the Ohio below Louisville. Suddenly the crew and passengers saw the water become waves and the river bluffs crumble and fall. The boat jerked at her anchor. Boats lying alongside the banks were wrecked or cast adrift.

At daybreak, as the New Orleans approached New Madrid, the air was thick and oppressive. Aboard ship furniture was jarred by repeated shocks. Afraid to moor to the shore at night, the crew moored to small islands. One morning they found their mooring line leading down into the water. The whole island had disappeared.

One crater along the Mississippi was later measured at sixty three feet in diameter and sixteen feet deep. Flint, a geographer, visited the area a few years after the quake and saw hundreds of deep chasms. Coal or near coal had been thrown out. Twenty pound pieces were thrown as far as 160 feet. The earth threw up sand and shale with the gases.

A typical faint, dull, rumbling rushing noise preceded the worst shock on Feb. 7th The earth was in constant oscillation for several days. On a boat anchored thirteen miles above New Madrid, a patron reported he was wakened by a tremendous roaring noise. He related the experience to William Shaler who wrote of it in a letter. The vessel shook violently. Trees feel in every direction; those standing were shaking like reeds. Sparks of fire shot from the ground. The crew immediately cut cable and put off into midstream where they found the current running backward. They were carried upstream for about one minute "with the velocity of the swiftest horse." When the current resumed its course, they continued downstream.

Whole forests were flattened. New Madrid had sunk twelve feet below its level and was entirely deserted. Only two boats out of thirty had escaped destruction there. One fully-loaded barge had been split in two and turned upside down.

Another falls was formed about eight miles below New Madird, and it took five days for the river to wear it away. All during this time, the earth trembled at five- minute intervals.

This reversion of current and formation of falls or barriers were, according to geologist N.S. Shaler, "among the most surprising results of earthquake action every recorded."

Earthquakes sometimes occur in pairs. The first shock of the New Madrid earthquakes occurred on the same night as the famous Caracas quake where thousands were killed. It is doubtful that those more fatal shocks were nearly as violent as those of the New Madrid quake.

Indian lore, geological evidence, and history show the area to have an earthquake history. Seismically, the most active regions in the eastern United States are along the middle part of the Mississippi river in the earthquake area named after the river Shocks have been reported previous to 1811; in 1776 and 1791. There have been many minor ones since.

While there is reason to anticipate a recurrence which could cause serious damage to such places as Cairo and Memphis and minor damage to St. Louis, it is well to remember that no place on earth is earthquake proof.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—An allergy is nothing to be sneezed at. Unfortunately, the millions who feel they do not react to pollen, strawberries, chocolate, animal dander or their spouses make it more difficult for the many who do.

What do allergies have to do with home furnishings? More than most people realize.

For example, when told by her husband's doctor that a wool wall-to-wall carpet held elements that triggered his attacks, a wife countered, "It's all in his head. You don't expect me to rip up this good carpet!"

A child whose mother took away stuffed toys to which he was allergic lashed out, "I hate you."

Allergies are equally severe for those who are allergic and for those who try to ease the sufferer's woes.

This is a fact that Mrs. Evelyn Ketchum Gray discovered growing up in Springfield, Mo. She recalls rushing to take care of her asthmatic father. Other similar family experiences led her to set up a business designing and decorating homes for persons with allergies.

Through the years she discovered there is scarcely a thing on this earth someone isn't allergic to. "One woman," she said, "may be allergic to her garters, another to all stockings except pure silk, others to all forms of dyes and bleaches."

Her current business includes allergy-free products such as toys stuffed with molded vinyl that can be boiled to kill any allergy-triggering contaminants and an air purifier/precipitator that takes in gases and other air pollutants.

Her products are interesting, but just as vital is Mrs. Gray's approach to decorating for the extremely allergic individual, one who reacts to a variety of fibers, dyes or just the normal dust-and-pollen-attracting items, such as upholstery.

As a consultant to doctors and their patients by referral, Mrs. Gray finds cool colors are most suitable "because sensitive persons will get stirred up and react to hot colors. This is wrong for an allergic child or adult because rest is important for them."

She discovered in decorating for her husband, who is color blind, that soft greens are very good and she throws in turquoise for contrast. Shopping today's synthetic market, Mrs. Gray likes to use wall coverings that don't hold dust, fiberglass panels, vinyl-coated pre-finished wall paneling or heavy plastic window shades in pastels. A model apartment she set up for General Tire included vinyl fabrics for upholstery, bed covers, walls and windows since she says, "I haven't found anyone alergic to vinyl."

With these seemingly cold items she likes to round or soften shapes in a room wherever possible.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—Has any vice president of the United States ever resigned from that office?

A—Only one—John C. Calhoun in 1832.

Q—By whom were the Hanging Gardens of Babylon built?

A—It is believed that Nebuchadnezzar ordered the garden built to honor his wife, who missed her mountain home.

Q—Why is Colorado popularly known as "The Centennial State"?

A—The name stems from the fact that it was admitted to the Union in 1876, the 100th anniversary of American independence.

Q—Who was the first Boy Scout to become president of the United States?

A—John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Q—For whom is the poinsettia plant named?

A—Dr. Joel Poinsett of South Carolina who introduced it to the United States about 1835.

Q—What is the meaning of the name Charles?

A—Charles or Karl stems from the High German word for "full-grown man." Because so many kings, from the time of Charlemagne on down, were given the name of Charles, it came to mean "great man," "manly."

HOW NOW, ANOTHER MAO? After months of searching, filmmakers have found someone to portray the role of Mao Tse-tung. He's Conrad Yama, left, a Japanese actor born in California. The portrait of Communist China's leader, right, illustrates the startling resemblance between the two men. Yama had to shave part of his head and practice a Chinese accent for the part.

If one is to predict earthquakes, it is essential to understand the relation of their occurrence to geology. This relationship is one of the significant aspects. of the California earthquake system. We know a great deal about the correlation with geology and can actually observe the slow movement along the major faults, such as the San Andreas.

IF WE ARE TO DEVELOP an understanding of the earthquakes of the southeast Missouri area, we must determine their relation to the geology of the upper part of the earth. The upeer part is essential becuase the earthquakes of the area occur between the surface of the earth and a depth of approximately fifteen miles. Washington University scientists have been engaged for the past three years in a research project o develop ths understanding, and, hopefully, to give some idea of whether the earthquakes of southeast Missouri are related to a major region of weakness in the upper part of the earth extending into the St. Lawrence region.

The approach that we have used is to try to learn the details of the geology of the upper fifteen miles of the earth. To do this, we need to make use of indirect techniques, because as yet it is not possible to drill to those depths, and even if it were, the cost of enough holes to determine the details reuiqred would be astronomical. Consequently, two approaches are used, each of which can be pursued independently until sufficient data are available to fuse them.

One approach is to make a detailed study of the geology of the area from surface rock outcrops and data available from wells drilled for water and mineral exploration. This study must be carried out over a large area that includes most of Missouri, southern Illinois, eastern Arkansas, western Kentucky, and western Tennessee. Particular emphasis is placed upon determining a detailed picture of the structural geology of the area and its evolution. This approach yields detailed information about faults and other structural features in the upper ones to two miles of the earth, but it is necessary also to determine how the geologic feautres neat the surface relate to those deeper in the earth where earthquake sources are located.

The latter information is derived from application of geophysical methods. In the problem under study, emphasis has been placed on the use of a gravity method and a magnetic method. In the former a highly sensitive instrument, a gravimeter, is used to measure very small differences in the gravitational field between any two points on the earth's surface. In the latter, two techniques have been utilized-one involves a similar measurement for the vertical intensity component of the earth's magnetic field on the surface of the earth; the other is to trail a magnetometer behind an airplane and continuously measure either the total intensity of the earth's field at flight elevation or to measure differences in this field.

BOTH THE GRAVITY and magnetic methods yield field data that can be translated into geologic information. The quality and accuracy of the translation depends upon many factors and it is important to realize that more than one interpretation of the data is possible. However, having duly noted that the techniques are not unique, let us assume that we can limit the possible solutions to one or two that have real geologic significance and proceed to our problem. Before discussing how these data reveal geologic information, it is interesting to note the sensitivity of the instrument. For instance the gravimeter used in this survey is capable of measuring one part in ten million of the earth's gravity field. This is equivalent to the change in gravity that one would encounter by going up approximately one-tenth of one foot in elevation.

It has been stated that these methods can be used to obtain information about the geology of the earthquake region. How this is actually accomplished is not important here but is might help to give some insight into why it is possible. Consider only the the gravity method. We know the value that the earth's surface. Because the distribution of rocks in the earth is not uniform and because the density of the rocks in the non-uniform distribution differs, there is not a uniform distribution of mass. This non-uniform mass distribution produces deviations from the theoretical value. By determining the distribution of these deviations it is possible to relate them to the depth and nature of the rock distribution that produced the deviation pattern. Careful analysis of the changes in the earth's gravity field can give information about the location, direction, depth, and magnitude of geologic faults in the upper earth.

The geologic and the geophysical studies have progress to the stage where we have been able to put together an interesting picutre of the subsurface geologic structure in the southeast Missouri earthquake region. The details of the fault trends have been synthesized and superimposed on the aerial outline of the major and minor regions of disturbance of the 1811-12 earthquake sequence. With respect ot the major region, we note that is falls nearly within two large northeast trending faults which border a large downdropped block. One of these faults borders the eastern portion of Reelfoot Lake, which was created in the New Madrid earthquake. This is the only subsurface fault on which there is sufficient detail to know that is has been active in recent geologic time.

The data on this figure also show that there is a very strong northeast fault trend which extends to the eastern border of the mapped area and aligns with the trend shown on the earthquake epicenter map between southeast Missouri and the St. Lawrence Seaway.

North of New Madrid a fault is shown that trends to the northwest. This is also a major fault that parallels a major geolgic feature, known as the Pascola Arch, that is very old. We know from studying the egologic evolution of the area that the Pascola Arch was active in the geologic past, having been raised several thousand feet. Our data suggest that the northeast trending features are much younger than the northwest.

The presence of these two trends in the same area may explain why the earthquakes can be so intense in this region. The intersecting trends have produced an upper portion of the earth that is composed of relatively small blocks. It is far easier for the upper part of the earty to adjust to forces tending to disturb its equilibrium in an area composed of relatively small blocks than it is in an area that is not so composed. This, coupled with the fact that the area around New Madrid is par of a large region extending to the Gulf Coast that is slowly subsiding, and the area immediately to its northwest, the St. Francois Mountain retion, is slowly rising, makes it an extremely mobile region. Our geologic and geophysical studies indicate that this mobility is in part related to the nature of the rocks composing the upper part of the earth immediately below the sediments.

ALTHOUGH OUR RESULTS are still preliminary, there is evidence in the geophysical data to suggest that the New Madrid earthquake region is part of a major trend through the northeast, as indicated on the earthquake epicenter map. However, the geologic and geophysical data also suggest that it may be more active than some of the other protions of the trend because of current subsidence of the Gulf Coastal Plain and the rise of the St. Francois Mountains, and because of the block-liek mosaic due to the intersection of subsurface lines of weakness that extend deep into the upper part of the earth.

There is no evidence to suggest that the adjustments which produced the New Madrid earthquake are completed; on the contrary, all available evidence indicates that they are continuing. It is hoped that the research techniques being employed by Washington University scientists will provide valuable clues about the extent and magnitude of these changes deep within the earth. Sbutle differences in the readings obtained of the earth's gravity and magnetic fields, coupled with seismological and geological information, could some day enable scientists to predict exactly when major disturbances ill occur and to estimate their magnitude accurately.

The area devastated in 1811-12 is no longer a wilderness and another earthquake of the same magnitude would be a major catastrophe. It is imperative that research continue toward the ultimate objective of developing a reliable earthquake warning system.

FARM INCOME UP IN INDIA

NEW DELHI (AP) India's current agricultural boom is expected to raise this country's national income in 1967-1968 by 9 per cent.

Deputy Prime Minister Morarji Desai, who also is finance minister, told Parliament the industrial sector's contribution to this rise would be nil.

Nearly 14 different units of the industrial sector showed a significant decline in production, he said.

Nixon's Mind Believed Made Up on Some Posts

NEW YORK (AP) — President-elect Richard M. Nixon, continuing closed-door meetings with advisors and prominent Republican officeholders, apparently has just about made up his mind on some Cabinet appointments.

Although Nixon has said he'll make known no Cabinet choices before Dec. 6, GOP Sen. John G. Tower of Texas emerged from a Monday conference with the President-elect and acknowledged they'd talked about possible Cabinet selections, Democrats as well as Republicans.

Asked if it would be accurate to say Nixon has not yet decided on any Cabinet nominees, Tower carefully responded that Nixon indicated no final decisions to him—leaving wide open the suggestion that the incoming chief executive has privately reached, or is very close to, some final choices.

Tower, one of three prominent Republicans to meet with Nixon during the day, gave a thumbnail description of the kind of Cabinet he believes is being sought by Nixon: "People of great professional competence" whose ideas are not incompatible with those of the President-elect and who have an ability to implement those ideas.

The Texas senator said Nixon would like "geographical balance" in the Cabinet but would not sacrifice other considerations to parceling out appointments on a regional basis.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits of New York was another visitor who acknowledged talking to Nixon about specific jobs and specific possible officeholders. Like Tower, he wouldn't mention any names but offered this teasing comment:

"I happen to be the senior senator from a state with an awful lot of talent."

Javits, recently returned from a European tour, said Nixon specifically authorized him to state that the President-elect "showed an interest in" a proposal by the senator that if the Paris peace talks continue after Jan. 20, one of the two U.S. negotiators—W. Averell Harriman or Cyrus Vance—be retained by the new administration to provide continuity.

"The President-elect authorized me to report that he showed an interest in the question of continuity," said Javits, who added that the future President has made no decision on the matter.

Javits talked to Harriman and Vance while in Paris and said they are pushing their peace quest "without waiting for the new administration."

He said he found Europeans deeply interested in the achievement of a Vietnam peace. In response to a question, he said they are primarily interested in peace without consideration to the kind of settlement that might evolve.

Gov. James A. Rhodes of Ohio and the state's Republican chairman, John S. Andrews, talked to Nixon about prospective federal programs, including questions of bloc tax grants to the states and a major overhaul of the federal welfare program.

Rhodes, whose term as governor expires in 1971, told newsmen:

"I'm not a candidate for any job. I have not applied and I will not apply. I will serve out my term."

Later he talked about the need for the job to seek the man, which seemed to keep him still in the running for a possible high position in the Nixon administration.

Morgan Named To Court Post

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - Judge J.P. (June) Morgan of the Kansas City Court of Appeals will move up to the Missouri Supreme Court Jan. 1 to succeed retiring Judge Henry I. Eager.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes appointed Judge Morgan Monday from a panel of three nominees presented to him under the non-partisan court plan. The other two were Jackson County Circuit Judge Charles Shangler and Jack P. Prichard of Nevada, a Supreme Court commissioner.

Morgan, 52, was appointed to the Court of Appeals by Hearnes while serving as Livningston County Circuit judge.

He formerly was Chillicothe city attorney and Livingston County prosecuting attorney.

Probe Asked For Plane Cost Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department and the General Accounting Office were asked today to undertake fullscale investigations of why the C5A cargo plane—backbone of airlift planning for the next decade—may cost $1.2 billion more than original estimates.

The demand was made by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the Senate-House Economic Committee that recently heard testimony on contract overruns for the world's largest airplane.

It would be a derelection of duty, said Proxmire, for Congress to permit payment "of such an exorbitant increase in contract costs without scrutinizing the reasons given for the increase and, indeed, the entire circumstances."

"In view of the testimony we received in our hearings," the senator said, "very serious questions about the cost of the plane have been raised. For example, there is some evidence that poor management on the part of the contractor may be a significant cause of the increase in cost."

Earlier this month the Air Force said the price of the C5A could run $2 billion over original estimates of $3 billion for the first 120 planes. Later, however, "in response to querries," the Air Force put the figure at a more conservative $1.2 billion.

At the same time, the Pentagon said the C5A contract provides safeguards for the government and for Lockheed Aircraft Corp., maker of the frame, and General Eelectric Co., which makes the engines.

The higher price tag for the four-engine behemoth has been attributed to increased costs for labor and materials, introduction of new technology and unexpected technical troubles.

The C5A is designed to carry troops as well as big equipment like tanks and trucks. The firs model flew last spring and the Pentagon has maintained the craft will exceed performance guarantees of Locheed.

Proxmire asked the Genera Accounting Office, spending watchdog for Congress, to report to him within six weeks.

At the same time, he wrote to Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford urging Clifford to direct personally a study of "the enormous cost overruns."

In his letter to Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats, head of the GAO, the senator said "the option under which the Department of Defense could obligate itself to pay as much as $2 billion in excessive costs is due to be exercised by January 31, 1969.

"I am formally requesting that you take whatever steps may be necessary to prevent the signing of this option before your report is made to the Congress."

The senator wrote Clifford he hoped "you will instruct the responsible officials in the Department of Defense to give their fullest cooperation with the GAO investigating team, and that your own task force study group will make an objective and comprehensive study as soon as possible."

TOO MUCH HEAT

TORRINGTON, Wyo. (AP) — The Torrington fire department recently doused a fire in a camper trailer parked on a Torrington street, confining damage to a burned spot on the roof.

The fire chief said a glass bottle of butane gas had been overfilled and left in the camper. When the sun got around to the west, the sun's rays overheated the bottle and caused a pop-off valve to open. The butane gas seeped to a vent of a wall heater and was ignited.

New Men's Fashions Make It A Lively Christmas

Gift shopping for the men on your Christmas list will be a thrilling experience this year. The reason is fashion, according to the American Institute of Men's and Boys' Wear, the new, wider, wonderful world of men's fashion. If you have not been in a men's store in some time, youare in for a surprise. You will see a panorama of vivid color, bold pattern, and totally fresh style ideas. You may even see some things you would want to own and wear -- but better stick to the matter at hand -- gifts for the men.

Leading the list of gift candidates is the necktie because a man always use one more tie. You will have no difficulty selecting fist-fulls of good looking patterns but follow a few simple rules.

Take note of the types and colors of ties that your man wears the most. Those, unquestionably, represent his favorites. If he wears "shouldered" Forward Fashion clothes or prefers natural shoulder Traditional clothes, mention that fact to the salesman. Don't try to "reform" his tastes in ties. If he likes 'em bright an bold -- that's the kind to give him. On the other hand, if he prefers the more restrained patterns and colors -- don't try to "Brighten his appearance" with some of those vibrantly colored patterns, despite the fact that they are very popular this year.

A good fashion tie tip to keep in mind for all men is that most ties are quite a bit wider this Christmas. So, conservative or avant garde, he should have the new shpaes.

There's hardly ahusband, boy friend, brother, Dad or Grandad whose shirt wardrobe can't use some color. Color is the prevailing fashion theme that encompasses both the Traditional and Forward Fashion fellow. He may be a "button-down" man or he may be a "spread collar" fan, in either event the word i deeper tones of blue, yellow, gold, gray, tangerine, pink, coffee, mulberry, spruce and others too many to list. You can buy them solid, striped or decorated with smar checks or windowpanes.

Traditionalists will also go for the long point collars which can be worn with or without a pin, while the Contemporary crew will dig a high neckband, closely-set point "designer" collar.

Sport shirts are a challenge for the variety is so wide and handsome it is often difficult to make a choice. Virtually everyone is familiar with the popular turtleneck. This year they can be bought in both knitted and woven models. Among the top styles in knits are the single-fold mock-turtles, the classic polo collars and rolling Italian-type collars. Some of the woven shirts have ties to match.

Woven fabric sport shirts also offer choice of button-down, plain or Italian-type rolled collars. You can pick from plaids, plains, checks, stripes and "engineered" patterns. Key your gifts to his preferred colors and patterns and remember that he will want to wear his casual shirts under his sweaters, sport coats and blazers. Make color and pattern coordination your guide.

Sweaters make great Christmas presents. Will he get the most use from an "indoor" or "outdoor" style? Is he a skier, a skater or a fireplace watcher? Let the answers to those querise decide your choice.

There are big bulky knits, fine shell stitches, rugged fisherman types, suave cashmeres and lambs wools, solid colors, fancy patterns, mixtures, marled yarns, shetlands, mohairs, T-necks, mock-turtles, V-necks, crew-necks, sweater shirts, pullovers, cardigans and sweater vests -- just to give you an idea of the assortment from which uou can select.

Let's suppose you want to buy him a robe and you are not sure of his size. No problem at all! Select one of the current pouplar kimono models -- one size fits all. Those, as other robes, come in plains, patterns and pictorial motifs. Make his gift robe a luxurious silk or a practical terry, a lightweight travel robe or a warm woolen for wintry weather. You may also find that an abbreviated "shave coat" is what he needs.

Even the plain old pajama has been given a lively look. Novelty types that emulate sportswear, karate coats or Grandpa's night shirts are available. The selction of colors, patterns and fabrics are virtually endless. If he is of a practical bent, keep an eye peeled for wash-and-wear constructions.

hosiery for the men on your list is another item that offers no size problems. Whether he prefers dressy nylons or warm woolen blends, he can find a perfect fit in the stretchable one-size socks. The same is true of casual crew socks to team with slacks.

For businesswear he will want the over-the-calf "executive length" socks. And remember, the day of the plain black sock is past. Select colors to blend with his business suits, choose from smart ribs and neat patterns. For sportswear, buy his crew socks in the great new sportswear colors, some of which are solid (to wear wtih patterned slacks) others boldly patterned.

Jewelry is a traditional Christmas gift and the new cuff links, tie tacs, tie clasps, wrist watches and lighters will be found in their widest assortments in men's stors.

You can choose from classic designs, modern motifs, colorful semi-precious stones, wra-around baroque links or initialed sets. There are also fraternal emblems, signs of the Zodiac and regimental crests -- not to mention colorful enamel designs. His gift watch may be severely simple, chain-fastened or a waterproof model for swimming, sking diving, skiing or boating.

Have you though of giving him a pair of gloves? There are dressy capeskins, mochas and doeskins, casual pigskins and exotic hides, leather-palmed wools, driving models, ski mittens and big, burly shearlings. Select from unlined, silk-lined, wool-lined or fur-r-lined types. Some are in washable leathers, too.

Other fine fashion gifts include silk pocket squares to lend a smart touch to his business and sportswear outifts. Many men tuck them into the pockets of their tuxedos.

For his neck there are silk, wool, cashmere and reversible mufflers that switch from one color to another, plain to pattern or wook to silk. There are also warm woolen knit scarves in 6-foot lengths.

The new "apache" scarf, secured by a metal ring or cylinder, amkes a fine finishing touch for his sport shirts or T-necks, and the classic ascot is another interesting gift.

Newest in that area is the "sailor scarf" -- worn as a scarf, a belt or a tie.

Belts are a likely gift possibility. There are dressy business-like belts, sports belts and huge "antique" buckles, colorful surcingle webbings and, of course, stretch elastics. In some circles it is considered "in" to wear a gold or silver slip buckle on a luxurious alligator belt. Other leather goods always appropriate include wallets, pocket secretaries, credit card cases, passport cases, and attache cases.

Does he have a suitable place to keep his jewelry? If not, give him one of the many attractive jewel boxes that range in style from fine leathers to replicas of pirate chests or miniature cabinets. Some of these are combined with "dresser organizers" to help a man dress uickly in the mornings.

Toiletries have become an essential part of the well-groomed man's accessories. Sold singly or in complete sets there are 1000 and one scents and items. The scents include leathers, limes, exotic Oriental types, spices, and old standards like bay rum. In all of those scents there are shave creams, after shave lotions, colognes, deodorants, talcum powders, bath soaps, hair dressings, and skin conditioners.

One of the nicest things about this gift list is that it can be bought in a one-stop shop -- his favorite men's store.

MANY men widely known and acclaimed in their own times are little remembered later. William Carr Lane had an unusual record as 7-term mayor of St. LOuis in the first half of the last century, and was one of the several Missourians who played leading roles in making New Mexico, recently taken from Mexico, a part of the United States. Yet his name is little known in Missouri today.

William Carr Lane was one such leader. Lane was born 1788 years ago yesterday in Fayette County, Pennsylvania, completed four years of studies at Jefferson and Dickinson colleges and studies medicine in Louisville and Shelbyville, Ky. In the War of 1812 he was sergeon's mate at Fort Harrison and a short time later he was appointed post surgeon to serve with the Army is the general Upper Mississippi areas. He served past the termination of the war and was a little uncertain whether he wanted to make the army a career, but he resigned in 1819. Some of his Army associates were heeding the call of the West, and St. Louis then was the No. 1 attraction. So Lane went to St. Louis.

AFTER St. Louis was chartered in 1833, Lane entered the contest for mayor. His opponents were better known, the great Auguste Chouteau, for one, and Philip Leduc, and the majority of St. Louis residents at the time were French. But Lane put on a whirlwind campaign and got almost 55 per cent of the vote cast.

In addition to being one of the outstanding physicians of his period, the high points of Lane's career are as follows:

He was elected mayor of St. Louis for seven terms.

He served several terms in Congress.

He was appointed governor of the Territory of New Mexico and probably by his stubborn insistence kept Mexico from retrieving a part of the area claimed by the United States after the war with Mexico.

Lane was so popular that he couldn't seem to lose elections. After serving five times as mayor, he decided to "take it easy," but he ended up sering three terms in Congress. Then he came back home, to St. Louis, ready to "take it easy" again. He agreed to fill the unexpired term of a mayorality candidate, and was re-elected to two full terms.

In 1852, President Fillimore named Lane governor of the territory of New Mexico where other well-known and distinguished Missourians had served.

Lane may have played a far more important role in the final determination of the United States-Mexican boundaries than history reveals. After the war with Mexico, and after the tremendously large area of the Southwest had been taken over by the United States, Mexico requrested that it be allowed to retain the fertile Mesilla valley.

The victorious American armies were tqueror, contemplated the matter.

But William Carr Lane, as governor of the territory, said "no,' in no uncertain terms, and the consideration in Washington was abandoned.

When the great French patriot of the American REvolution, Marquis de Lafayette, who had sacrificed his own wealth and social position to fight for the Americans, visited St. Louis the frontier people gave him a great welcome. Governor Bates declined to serve as official host, with the lame excuse that the state did not have the money for such grandiose entertainment.

Mayor Lane assumed responsibilties and persuaded the board of aldermen to shoulder the financial burdens.

The cost to the city was $37. So many wealthy families undertook the entertaining that there was little left to pay for officially.

Although he is not widely known today, William Carr Lane was not completely forgotten. In World War II a Liberty ship was named after him.

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP)—Every woman has decisions to make about potatoes.Usually it's whether to mash, bake or scallop them.

It used to be that way, too, for Mrs. Glenn Gumlia, a Crookston, N.D. housewife. Then in 1962 she became manager of her family's farm. Now her decisions are whether to hold or to sell. How many to plant, and when to build a new storage warehouse.

When Mrs. Gumlia goes to the cities, she shops and has lunch in a tea room like other women. Also, she might sell 40 or 50 carloads of potatoes from the farm.

Though she does no actual farm labor, Mrs. Gumlia does the selling and cost accounting for the crops raised on the farm of her late father. This is 2400 acres of land. It's potatoes, sugarbeets and grains.

"My grandfather," says Mrs. Gumlia, "shipped one of the first carloads of potatoes out of the Red River Valley. That was in 1906."

"It is possible for a woman to run a farm," says Mrs. Gumlia, who is known as "Jody" (Jolanda) by her friends. "But," she adds, "being a woman is nothing but a handicap in the potato business."

Mrs. Gumlia earned a Phi Beta Kappa key at the University of Minnesota and a magna cum laude on her diploma.

Now Jody manages the acreage with her mother, a silent partner.

Her husband, Glenn, an electrical contractor, isn't too interested in farming. The Gumlia children are Leonard, 12, Julie, 11, and Roxy, 7.

Jody, who was Potato Queen in 1954, is most often publicized as an outstanding area golfer. "People think all I do is golf," says Jody, whose name appears in reports of women's golfing events. "Actually, about the only times I have golfed in the last five years have been with the children or in tournaments." She has become well known as a top golfer.

This fall a testing device from Red River Valley Research Center will be used in her new potato storage unit at her farm at Hoople.

When she has time, Jody enjoys community work. This includes teaching the senior department of the Sunday School at First Methodist Church in Crookston.

"I don't know how much time I spend on farm work," she says. "I just know I had to give up a lot of bridge and coffee parties."

Now when she sits down at the kitchen telephone after breakfast, it is not to chit chat with women friends. It's usually to talk about potatoes—by the carload.

Brother, I'm now 86 grey hairs greyer, three wrinkles saggier one figure droopier, and 10 times more poopedier.

The reason for this sad state of affairs is that Sunday was my B day -- to some of you that stands for birthday, but to the rest of us it's known as blah!!! day, and that's just what I had, 32 blahs and one ugh thrown in for good measure day.

I used to read in history books about people hunting for the fountain of youth and think how foolish they were. Now, I just wish someone would get on the stick and find the dern thing.

I'm terribly afraid from the reflection thrown back at me from my mirrow that I'm going to just age, boom, all at once like!

Gad I'm making myself feel ancient, I don't know which to pop in my mouth first, a vitamin or a dose of Lydia Pinkham (some one just walked by and suggested Carter's Little Liver Pills as an alternative?

Heaven knows if I feel this much of a has been now they'll have me in a nursing home in another 10 years, and I'll tell you true, if Charles and the boys don't quit bringing home livestock and projects for me to tend to I won't even last that long--I did get a the rabbit out of the shower and into the storage shed, but I've since then had a mouse on the dishwasher for a few days.

Oh my, I'm really just getting too old for this sort of thing--come to think of it, I believe I was born too old for this sort of thing.

Well, I must pull my feeble self together, crawl out of the rocker and begin dinner so my family can get the proper nourishment and be chock full of vim, vigor, and vitality--me, I guess I'll just settle for vague, varicose, and vertigo!

Safeguarded Documents

Final Canvass Defeats Bond Amendment

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - The final count shows Missouri voters defeated consitutional amendment to lower the voting requirements for local bond issues.

Secy. of State James C. Kirkpatrick reported Monday the official canvass gave the amendment 599,434 votes to 609,612 against it.

The unofficial count election night indicated the issue carried but the tabulation ended before all the outstate votes, and the absentee ballots, were tallied. Outstate opposition defeated the proposal.

If it had carried, the majority needed to pass a general obligation bond issue would have been cut from two-thirds to 60 per cent and revenue bond issues from four-sevenths to a simple majority.

A second amendment carried, 616,856 to 497,068. It will allow taxpayers to use a federal figures and interpretations in making out their state income tax forms, simplifying the job.

Social Status Rated Chief Barrier to Low-Income Housing

ST. LOUIS (AP) - A university sociologist said she questions whether middle class Negroes would be any more willing to welcome low-income housing to their neighborhoods than middle class Whites.

Dr. Sara Smith Sutker of the University of Missouri-St. Louis said preoccupation with social status, rather than racial prejudice, is the chief barrier to location of low-income housing in better neighborhoods.

Dr. Smith, of the University's center of community and metropolitan studies, expressed her view at a session of the St. Louis Board oof Aldermen conference on low-income housing.

"It is naive to assume that those whose precious social status is defined in terms of difference from the class just below them are going to welcome lower-class neighbors, White or Black," Dr. Sutker said.

Dr. Sutker said "good homes and neighborhoods are sacred to the middle class, and those who set heterogeneous neighborhoods as social goals must expect resistance."

Expression's Origin

AMNESTY ON BOOK FINES

CHICAGO (AP)—It was a lovely day at the library. Chicagoans were given a day of amnesty from paying fines for overdue books.

Now, the question is whether the deal has backfired.

Louis A. Lerner, the board member who suggested the day free of fines, said the gesture was a great success.

"Libraries from all over the country have contacted us about it," he said. Many valuable and out-of-print books were returned."

Chicagoans returned 104,893 overdue and missing books Jan. 2. However, since then borrowers have been lax about returning books and fines have dropped. Overdue fines in January totaled $17,000 as compared with $32,000 in 1967.

During February, the library collected $22,000 in fines.

HAS 23rd BABY

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP)—Mrs. Maria Beckham had her 23rd baby, and declared stoutly, "This is my last."

Baby Rosie, 7 pounds, 12 ounces, made Mrs. Beckham undisputed winner of the New Zealand baby stakes. A few weeks ago Mrs. Tina Tengu had her 21st child which was thought to be the New Zealand record.

At 45 Mrs. Beckham has amassed a family ranging in age from Robert, 27, down to Rosie. There are 21 grandchildren, but seven of her children have died.

Mrs. Beckham and her husband, who is unemployed and partly crippled with arthritis, live in the far north of the North Island. Their only income is from government family and other benefits, a total of 142 New Zealand dollars ($159 U.S.) a month.

Only two Presidents of the United States — Woodrow Wilson and Lyndon B. Johnson — were college debaters. But both of this year's candidates, Richard Nixon and Vice President Humphrey, were on their college teams.

Emmaretta Makes Her Mark(s)

She Goes Bare in 'Hair' for the Sake of Art

By ROGER DOUGHTY
NEA Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Emmaretta Marks is worried about the draft. Not the kind that wraps you in khaki, but the variety that can make you sneeze if it blows on you while you're wearing nothing but a great big smile, which Emmaretta often is.

At 23, Emmaretta is about as girlish as a girl can get. So the Selective Service does not scare her. She does have ample reason to worry about the wind.

Six days a week (never on Sunday, of course) Miss Marks and a bunch of other gals and guys strip off their clothes and inhibitions and stand before the world—or at least as much of the world as can squeeze into the Biltmore Theatre—in naked naturalness.

She does it for her art, which is acting.

Miss Marks, who wants to be a singer, is currently a swinger in what's known as "The American Tribal Love-Rock Musical." It's also known as "Hair."

"Hair" was written by Gerome Ragni and James Rado with music by Galt MacDermot. They describe it as prolove, prodrugs, prosex and antiestablishment, but the only thing anybody else seems to want to talk about is the nude scene.

Emmaretta Marks

Being nude is the most natural thing in the world.'

'At first,' she says, 'I just stripped to the waist and tried not to move, but other people in the cast complained that I was copping out.'

Thinking about it, Emmaretta says, "Clothes aren't a thing with me any more. They used to be, but not now."

The nude scene in "Hair" lasts about 20 seconds ("Never more than 30," Emmaretta swears), but it's probably the most reviewed half-minute in Broadway history.

"Some people miss the point of the entire first act because of the nude scene," Miss Marks claims. "The scene takes place in the last few seconds, but they're just waiting for that. From the time the curtain goes up you can hear them saying, 'Is it coming now? When is it going to happen?' "

How did a nice girl like Emmaretta get tangled up in "Hair"? How does she feel about shedding her threads in front of relatives, former boy friends and assorted strangers?

"You have to remember," she points out, "that we don't have to take our clothes off if we don't want to. It's optional. Some people always do, others don't."

Personally, Emmaretta can't recall wanting to stay covered up very often.

"At first," she says, "I just stripped to the waist and tried not to move, but other people in the cast complained that I was copping out. The boys took everything off and so did some of the other girls, so one day I just decided to see how it felt."

"It's a very beautiful feeling," she says. "Being nude is the most natural thing in the world. At least it should be."

To prove she no longer has any hang-ups where clothes are concerned, Emmaretta appeared in the all-together one evening when her grandfather, an aunt and uncle and a couple of cousins showed up to see the show.

"Granddaddy is 83 and a Baptist minister," smiles Emmaretta, "but he wasn't shocked. He just said, 'I guess you could say that was pretty far out.' My uncle was so inspired by 'Hair' that he's writing his own play. It's about the misadventures of a schoolteacher."

She doesn't know if there'll be any nude scenes in that one.

"I guess," Miss Marks went on, "that the only reason I'd refuse to appear nude is if I happened to be too tired to get my clothes off quickly. You really have to do a fast strip."

Looking back, Emmaretta realizes that she's come a long way.

"I went to a Catholic school when I was a girl," she recalls, "and I'd just flip on days when we could wear normal clothes instead of uniforms. Look at me now."

Emmaretta does have some hang-ups. For example, she doesn't like New York, the sound of fingernails being scraped across a blackboard and sandwiches. Of the latter, she says:

"I hate chewing bread and a lot of other things together."

Only the future will tell if Emmaretta will make it big as a singer, or a painter, writer, composer, musician or poet, which are her alternate career choices. For the moment she has no complaints.

After all, where but in "Hair" could a girl get such good exposure?

Emmaretta Makes Her Mark(s)

She Goes Bare in 'Hair' for the Sake of Art

By ROGER DOUGHTY
NEA Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Emmaretta Marks is worried about the draft. Not the kind that wraps you in khaki, but the variety that can make you sneeze if it blows on you while you're wearing nothing but a great big smile, which Emmaretta often is.

At 23, Emmaretta is about as girlish as a girl can get. So the Selective Service does not scare her. She does have ample reason to worry about the wind.

Six days a week (never on Sunday, of course) Miss Marks and a bunch of other gals and guys strip off their clothes and inhibitions and stand before the world—or at least as much of the world as can squeeze into the Biltmore Theatre—in naked naturalness.

She does it for her art, which is acting.

Miss Marks, who wants to be a singer, is currently a swinger in what's known as "The American Tribal Love-Rock Musical." It's also known as "Hair."

"Hair" was written by Gerome Ragni and James Rado with music by Galt MacDermot. They describe it as prolove, prodrugs, prosex and antiestablishment, but the only thing anybody else seems to want to talk about is the nude scene.

Emmaretta Marks
'Being nude is the most natural thing in the world.'

'At first,' she says, 'I just stripped to the waist and tried not to move, but other people in the cast complained that I was copping out.'

Thinking about it, Emmaretta says, "Clothes aren't a thing with me any more. They used to be, but not now."

The nude scene in "Hair" lasts about 20 seconds ("Never more than 30," Emmaretta swears), but it's probably the most reviewed half-minute in Broadway history.

"Some people miss the point of the entire first act because of the nude scene," Miss Marks claims. "The scene takes place in the last few seconds, but they're just waiting for that. From the time the curtain goes up you can hear them saying, 'Is it coming now? When is it going to happen?' "

How did a nice girl like Emmaretta get tangled up in "Hair"? How does she feel about shedding her threads in front of relatives, former boy friends and assorted strangers?

"You have to remember," she points out, "that we don't have to take our clothes off if we don't want to. It's optional. Some people always do, others don't."

Personally, Emmaretta can't recall wanting to stay covered up very often.

"At first," she says, "I just stripped to the waist and tried not to move, but other people in the cast complained that I was copping out. The boys took everything off and so did some of the other girls, so one day I just decided to see how it felt."

"It's a very beautiful feeling," she says. "Being nude is the most natural thing in the world. At least it should be."

To prove she no longer has any hang-ups where clothes are concerned, Emmaretta appeared in the all-together one evening when her grandfather, an aunt and uncle and a couple of cousins showed up to see the show.

"Granddaddy is 83 and a Baptist minister," smiles Emmaretta, "but he wasn't shocked. He just said, 'I guess you could say that was pretty far out.' My uncle was so inspired by 'Hair' that he's writing his own play. It's about the misadventures of a schoolteacher."

She doesn't know if there'll be any nude scenes in that one.

"I guess," Miss Marks went on, "that the only reason I'd refuse to appear nude is if I happened to be too tired to get my clothes off quickly. You really have to do a fast strip."

Looking back, Emmaretta realizes that she's come a long way.

"I went to a Catholic school when I was a girl," she recalls, "and I'd just flip on days when we could wear normal clothes instead of uniforms. Look at me now."

Emmaretta does have some hang-ups. For example, she doesn't like New York, the sound of fingernails being scraped across a blackboard and sandwiches. Of the latter, she says:

"I hate chewing bread and a lot of other things together."

Only the future will tell if Emmaretta will make it big as a singer, or a painter, writer, composer, musician or poet, which are her alternate career choices. For the moment she has no complaints.

After all, where but in "Hair" could a girl get such good exposure?

The Editor's Corner

SPENDING a recent weekend with friends on the Jersey shore, we were witness to a bit of drama, heroically underplayed as is their wont by members of the United States Coast Guard.

The friends' summer home, located at the northern tip of Long Beach Island, is within shouting distance of historic Barnegat Light. This landmark is a guidepost to Barnegat Inlet, the entryway from the Atlantic Ocean into Barnegat Bay. The bay, some 25 miles in length and protected from the ocean by Long Beach Island and similar land masses, is a shallow-water haven and home port of hundreds of pleasure craft and fishing boats of all manner.

Sitting with our host in a glass-enclosed widow's walk atop the two-story frame structure built some years ago by a retired sea captain, from which vantage point both the ocean and the bay are visible, we were idly watching the activity around the BArnegat Bay Station of the Coast Guard next door while chatting of most inconsequential matters.

Suddenly, the mood changed. A vigorous game of touch football abruptly came to a halt as each participant hurried to an appointed task. In less time than it takes to tell it, Coast Guard vehicles were speeding across the narrow strip of land to the bay side of the island where the Guard maintains a small variety of water craft at the ready for all exigencies. Shortly, a rescue boat was churning rapidly through the waters, rounding the lighthouse, headed for the open sea.

Meanwhile, the reactions of the people still on the ocean beach, soaking up the late afternoon rays of a fast departing sun, were revealing. A handy telescope brought the scene right into the sheltered widow's walk. From the scurrying about and the attention given to whatever was happening-the actual event was hidden from our view by an unfortunately positioned beach-side cottage-it was apparent some emergency of consequence had arisen. It also was quite evident that this was no catastrophe; two surf fishermen in the midst of the hubbub continued casting their baited lines into the rolling water.

With curiosity piqued beyond the limits of endurance, we accompanied our host to ascertain the cause of the excitement. The path to the beach passed the front steps of the Coast Guard Station headquarters where a handful of the local contingent were enjoying a leisurely smoke on the front porch. To a hast inquiry came this casual reply from one of the Guardsmen:

"Nothing unusual; nothing to get excited about. A boat overturned." And by the time we reached the water's edge, all was calm.

Later, it was learned that a 24-foot cabin cruiser, plowing through the heavy waters toward Barnegat Inlet and its berth-it was one of a long line of such craft in the narrow channel leading to the protection of the bay-was caught broadside, without warning by a large wave. The cruiser capsized and its three passengers were dumped unceremoniously into the briny. The trio floundered about in the water, tryping to keep afloat as they watched their boat begin to settle in the channel, some ten feet deep.

In a matter of minutes, the Coast Guard crew was on the scene, had brought the three ill-starred sailors on board and had secured a line about the sinking cruiser. And though their first line parted, the Guardsmen soon had the boat in tow and were headed back to the bay. The sea-dampened threesome had been given dry clothing and, in general, had been made as comfortable as the circumstances allowed. Actually, an old-timer said, it was all in a day's work for the United States Coast Guard.

However, this witness was greatly impressed with the efficiency of their operation. The smoothness with which they functioned was in sharp contrast to the less cohesive procedures generally credited to governmental exercises. And there was evidence of a strong esprit de corps among the Guardsmen.

A little-known outfit in much of the country, the Coast Guard was created by an act of Congress on January 28, 1915, through the merger of the former U.S. Revenue Cutter Service and the one-time U.S. Life Saving Service. Subsequently, both the Lighthouse Service and the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation of the Department of Commerce became part of the Coast Guard. Today, this service's three major functions are law enforcement on the high seas and navigable waters of the United States, military readiness, and the furtherance of maritime safety. One of its far-reaching responsiblities is the supervision of the nation-wide Power Squadron activity by which boating safety, rules of the sea, navigation and other facets of operating small craft are imparted to the nation's weekend sea dogs.

Though seldom given much thought by the average citizen, it is excellent, around-the-clock protection the United States Coast Guard is providing for us all and from this corner oges a hearty salute to the Barnegat Bay Station crew and their fellow Guardsmen everywhere who are keeping alive the Guard's historic motto, "Always Ready."

G.M.A.C, News and Views

For the little ladies on your Christmas list, a dress with pinafore will win applause. Cinderella's dirndl and novelty print (left) are both topped with spanking white pinafores. For Santa's pajama party, ski sleep togs designed by Pindyck in Norwegian print top and solid cuffed bottoms (right) are sure to be hits of the season.

ONE of the prime concerns of parents today appears to be the lack of rapport between theand their off-spring and how often has the complain been sounded by the younger generation that, "My parents just don't understand me."

One father recently voiced his answer to this criticism with this comment: "How can you understand kids today when mostly they just grunt their replies to questions. And whey they do use words, I seldom know what they mean. These kids seem to haveve a language of their own. I guess what we need is a 'Parent-Child-Child-Parent' dictionary like we have 'French-Englosh English Fench.'"

While this idea has a lot of merit, we think that Mark Twain came as close to a solution more than a half-century ago. The great American humorist said:

"When I was a boy of 14, my father was so ignorant I could hardly stand to have the old man around. But when I got to be 21, I was astonished athow much the old man had learned in seven years."

It's a frightening thing for a father -- or a mother, for that matter--to realize that he just "can't get through" to his teen-age children. This lace of affnity, while not all-encompassing, is of such magnitude in pecific areas that to the parents it seems highly improbably, if not totally impossible, that the younger generation today will ripen into anything more than head-strong, ill-kempt, hippie-inspired, diffident mediociriteis. The principal points of contention between the teenager and his parent primarily involve manners of attire, proper operation and care of the family automobile, the need for regular and adequate rest, budgeting both time and money, the size of allowances and what is requred in returne for that weekly stipened, and the inevitable parental inquiry on Friday and Saturday nights, "Where are you going, with whom, and what time will you be home?"

We recall a discussion of this problem during a neighborhood gathering several years ?aog. One couple proudly asserted that they didn't have any problems with their two sons, that they never experience any of the worries or anxieties expressed by the other parents. On the surface, their boys were veritable "paragons of viture." Both were honor students-- the older a college freshman and the younger a high school sophomore. They were polite, neat and punctual.

Following this dicourse, interest in these youngsters and their apparent perfect relationship with their parents was whetted. The family was, in effect, put under a microscope to discover how they had succeeded in establishing the child-parent accord so obviouslydeneid the other families. This laboratory exercise was quite revaealing, proving once again that "beauty is only skin deep."

It was learned that whenever the boys thought they were being observed by their parents or friends of the family, their decorum was impeccab.e They were being observed by their parents or friends or friends of the family, their decorum was impeccable. They never questioned a parental decision; once away from home, however, they did exactly waht their companions did. They were never caught in their Jekyll-Hyde machinations. The older boy, a careful driver around town, was just as fool-hardy as othes his age when on the opne highway. And the younger lad was ne of the first in his class to smoke-- away from prying eyes, of course--and successfully covered his actions with an-abe-old reedmy, Sen. Sen. It was he, also, who left home each morning for school with his shirtail properly tucked into the top of his trousers and a tie neatly knotted around his neck. The minute he reached his locker off came the tie and out came the shirtail in conformity with his classmates. The one area in which neighter slipped, howev er, was in academic standijnng. While they didn't partiticape in shcool athletics, they were prennial honor students.

WE like the words of Mark Twain and are awaiting the day our youngsters have reached the age, be it 21 or older, when the yey recognize that their parent's generation does not representa an era of reaction, that their ideas about cleanliness, religion and morality are not old-fashioned. It is fairly certain that when this maturity is reached it won'tbe long before they will be experiencing the same child-parent relationship, often discordant, that we are today. It may happen on earth, or it may occur after they've moved their family to the moon or one of the planets. But it is almost as inevitable as llife itself. With just the slightest feeling of retribution, it can be put quite simply: "We can hardly wait.

Scallops are really shellfish.

One father recently voiced his answer to this criticism with this comment: "How can you understand kids today when mostly they just grunt their replies to questions. And whey they do use words, I seldom know what they mean. These kids seem to haveve a language of their own. I guess what we e n e d i s a 'Parent-Child-Child-Parent' dictionary like we have 'French-Englosh English Fench.'"

While this idea has a lot of merit, we think that Mark Twain came as close to a solution more than a half-century ago. The great American humorist said:

"When I was a boy of 14, my father was so ignorant I could hardly stand to have the old man around. But when I got to be 21, I was astonished athow much the old man had learned in seven years."

It's a frightening thing for a father -- or a mother, for that matter--to realize that he just "can't get through" to his teen-age children. This lace of affnity, while not all-encompassing, is of such magnitude in pecific areas that to the parents it seems highly improbably, if not totally impossible, that the younger generation today will ripen into anything more than head-strong, ill-kempt, hippie-inspired, diffident mediociriteis. The principal points of contention between the teenager and his parent primarily involve manners of attire, proper operation and care of the family automobile, the need for regular and adequate rest, budgeting both time and money, the size of allowances and what is requred in returne for that weekly stipened, and the inevitable parental inquiry on Friday and Saturday nights, "Where are you going, with whom, and what time will you be home?"

We recall a discussion of this problem during a neighborhood gathering several years ?aog. One couple proudly asserted that they didn't have any problems with their two sons, that they never experience any of the worries or anxieties expressed by the other parents. On the surface, their boys were veritable "paragons of viture." Both were honor students-- the older a college freshman and the younger a high school sophomore. They were polite, neat and punctual.

Following this dicourse, interest in these youngsters and their apparent perfect relationship with their parents was whetted. The family was, in effect, put under a microscope to discover how they had succeeded in establishing the child-parent accord so obviouslydeneid the other families. This laboratory exercise was quite revaealing, proving once again that "beauty is only skin deep."

It was learned that whenever the boys thought they were being observed by their parents or friends of the family, their decorum was impeccab.e They were being observed by their parents or friends or friends of the family, their decorum was impeccable. They never questioned a parental decision; once away from home, however, they did exactly waht their companions did. They were never caught in their Jekyll-Hyde machinations. The older boy, a careful driver around town, was just as fool-hardy as othes his age when on the opne highway. And the younger lad was ne of the first in his class to smoke-- away from prying eyes, of course--and successfully covered his actions with an-abe-old reedmy, Sen. Sen. It was he, also, who left home each morning for school with his shirtail properly tucked into the top of his trousers and a tie neatly knotted around his neck. The minute he reached his locker off came the tie and out came the shirtail in conformity with his classmates. The one area in which neighter slipped, howev er, was in academic standijnng. While they didn't partiticape in shcool athletics, they were prennial honor students.

WE like the words of Mark Twain and are awaiting the day our youngsters have reached the age, be it 21 or older, when the yey recognize that their parent's generation does not representa an era of reaction, that their ideas about cleanliness, religion and morality are not old-fashioned. It is fairly certain that when this maturity is reached it won'tbe long before they will be experiencing the same child-parent relationship, often discordant, that we are today. It may happen on earth, or it may occur after they've moved their family to the moon or one of the planets. But it is almost as inevitable as llife itself. With just the slightest feeling of retribution, it can be put quite simply: "We can hardly wait.

Jupiter is second only to Venus as the brightest of the planets, according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

THE NEW MADRID earthquake sequence began without warning during the early morning hours of December 16, 1811. The number of shocks, the continuity of the disturbance, the area affected, and the severity of the sequence surpasses any recorded earthquake in the history of the North American Continent. Fortunately, the region was sparsely populated at the time. New Madrid consisted of approximately 200 families and Little Prairie (now known as Caruthersville) numbered about 100 families. Because the area was largely wilderness, relatively little attention was paid to the earthquake at the time and published accounts are few and incomplete.

Geologist Myron L. Fuller, who carried out the most comprehensive surface study of the area of disturbance, wrote the most complete and lucid description of the event. According to Fuller, the people of New Madrid were awakened around 2:00 a.m. by the groaning, creaking, and cracking of the timbers of their houses and cabins, by the wild movement of furniture, and by the crashing of chimneys. They rushed to the streets and were unable to return to their homes throughout the rest of the night and most of the next day because of repeated shocks. Soon after daylight another shock fully as severe as the first,but preceded by alow rumbling noise, rocked the region. The people observed that the ground rose and fell much like the long, low swell of the sea. Landslides swept down steep bluffs and some areas were uplifted and others sank and were flooded with water rising from fissures in the ground.

The Mississippi also was significantly affected as great waves were created. The water returning to the river broke off thousands of trees, high banks were caved, and whole islands disappeared. As the day wore on, the shocks continued but gradually diminished in intensity. Less frequent shocks continued until January 23, when another shock similar in intensity and destructiveness to the first occurred. Two weeks of quiescence followed the aftershock sequence. Then on February 7, several very severe shocks were felt, the last as large or larger than any of the previous ones. The earth vibrated continuously for several days. For approximately a year small shocks occurred every few days.

The earthquake sequence produced a significant change in the physiographic features of a sizeable area. The area of major disturbance (see map on page 51), which was characterized by uplifted regions, sunken areas, fissures, sinks, sand blows, large landslides, and widespread destruction of houses, extended a hundred miles from Cairo, Illinois, on the north to Memphis, Tennesee, on the south, and approximately fifty miles east-west, which encompasses an area of somewhere between 3000 and 5000 square miles. Small disturbances, such as caving of banks and some fissuring, and minor structural damage extended from Herculaneum, Missouri on the north to the mouth of the Arkansas River, approximately 100 miles south of Memphis, on the south. This area is largely confined to regions within fifty miles of the rivers.

Perhaps more startling is the fact that at such distant locales as Detorit (600 miles) and Boston (1100 miles), the larger shocks were felt without the aid of instruments. Fuller estimated that a total area of one million square miles, which is half of the continental United States, was so disturbed that the vibrations were felt without the aid of instruments. The great Alaskan earthquake of 1964, which produced significant surface damage in many areas of Alaska, was not felt without the aid of instrumetns over such an area, although many bodies of water were so disturbed that people as far away as Texas noted the effects.

The exact number of lives lost during the sequence is unknown but it was relatively small. Only one life was lost in New Madrid and no loss was reported in Caruthersville. This was due to the few inhabitants and the nature of the houses, which were mostly log cabins able to flex without caving. Contrast this to the 10,000 lives lost in Caracas, Venezuela, from an earthquake in 1812, most of them lost as a result of crumbling brick walls. The recent Iran earthquake took more than 8000 lives. There was probably much loss of life on the Mississippi River, however. Many of the islands that disappeared were known to be inhabited, largely by river priates. Numerous boats were sunk or overturned and some crewmen were never found.

A logical question to ask is: was this sequence a freak event or is the New Madrid area part of one of the "earthquake belts"? Of even more interest to those now living in the area is the question of whether there will be another large sequence like that of 1811-12. This leads, of course, directly to the problem of earthquake prediction. However, without recourse to a consideration of the prediction problem, one might get some insight into the second question from a consideration of the first and by seeking evidence of a prior history of earthquakes.

There are written records, Indian legends, and geologic evidence to indicate priot activity. Three earthquakes were reported in the same area between 1776 and 1795. The Indians of the Mississippi Valley had a legendary tale of a great earthquake in the same area. More significant are the records that can be found in the surface geology and topography. Fuller has described surface cracks as large as those opened by the 1811-12 sequence with trees at least 200 years old growing on the bottoms or slopes. This would suggest that within the two to three hundred years before 1900, one or more earthquakes took place with intensity at least as high as those of the 1811-12 sequence. There also is evidence of faulting in the youngest rocks of the region. This faulting is of such a nature that it could not have been part of the earthquake sequence of 1811-12 nor even of a few hundred years earlier. This suggests earthquake activity of significant magnitude over the past several thousand years.

THE AREA IS STILL ACTIVE. Approximately one hundred earthquakes have been reported there since the 1811-12 sequence. The most reliable index, however, is the activity reported since seismograph stations have been installed by the Department of Geophysics at Saint Louis University. With data from theses stations, the epicenter (the location on the earth's surface above the center of the earthquake region) can be reliably located. Recording over the past twenty-five years shows thaost of the local earthquake activity occurred in the New Madrid area. Thus, the geologic, written, and seismic records all show that the same area has been more or less continuously active for a long period of time This suggests that the sequence of 1811-12 was not a freak event-and that it is conceivable to view the future with a good deal of suspicion. This is not to say that a sequence as dstructive as the New Madrid earthquake will happen again; but, there is no evidence to show that it is unlikely.

Because the area under discussion can be considered as an active region, it is interesting to address ourselves to the question posed earlier and see if it belongs to an earthquake belt. A map of the epicenters of the larger earthquakes through 1962 was plotted by the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey. A modified version of the map is shown on page 51. The New Madrid sequence is indicated by the solid triangle in southeast Missouri. Careful study of this map leads one to believe that several trends are evident. One trend is north-south from western Montana through Utah and into Arizona. The large triangle represents the famous Hebgen Lake earthquake of 1959. Moving to the east we note approximate north-south trends extending from northern Kansas into South Dakota and from the vicinity of St. Louis into Wisconsin.

The earthquakes in southeastern Missouri appear to fall on a line of epicenters that extend into the St. Lawrence Seaway. There appears to be another alignment through the eastern portion of the United States from North Carolina into Maine. On can also visualize an east-west alignment through the southern portion of the United States from the Texas panhandle to the east coast,perhaps including the Charleston, South Carolina, earthquake of 1886, shown by the large triangle.

If we consider only those alignments east of the Rocky Mountain area, some can be correlated with known regional geologic features. For example, the alignment along the east coast of the United States corresponds with the Appalachian mountain trend. This type of correlation with major geologic feautres does not exist for the trends through St. Louis and southeast Missouri. I fact, the trend from southesat Missouri. In fact, the trend from southeast Missouri to the St. Lawrence Seaway cuts across several major geologic features. It is well established that earthquakes in the more active regions of the world are associated with major geologic features-for example, the California earthquakes are associated with the San Adnrews Fault, which is clearly visible on the surface, and other major faults; the island systesm, such as the Aluetians, Japan, and others reflect major weaknesses of the upper part of the earth and have many earthquakes. The apparent lack of correlation of the earthquakes of the southeast Missouri-St. Lawrence Seaway axis could be significant and suggest that they are not part of a grend, but isolated segments of activity
